Truman Calls For Passage Of Job Bill by Thanksgiving

Compromise Hinted In Letter to House Democratic Leader, Committee May Act

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

President Truman yesterday called for passage of House-stalled full employment legislation by Thanksgiving but opened the door for a compromise bill in a written appeal to the House Democratic leadership.

The letter, addressed to Majority Leader John W. McCormack (D., Mass.) was dated October 29. This was the day before Mr. Truman sharply criticized two House committees for delaying action on his full employment and jobless pay bills.

"Dear John," the President wrote, "I am most anxious that the House Committee on Expenditures in the Executive departments report out the full employment legislation. Such legislation is of the utmost urgency and importance to the future of our Nation."

Compromise Hinted

The hint of compromise came farther on in the letter with these words: "I do not refer to any specific bill. I refer to the general purposes and principles of full-employment legislation."

Several members of the committee, among them Chairman Carter Manasco (D., Ala.), interpreted this as a compromise bid.

"I told the President I was willing to support a compromise when I was down there a few days ago," said Manasco. "I told him I was unwilling to support any language 'assuring' jobs for all."

Manasco said he could not "promise" eve na compromise bill would be cleared from the committee by Thanksgiving.

No Reference to Pay Bill

The President's letter made no direct reference to the unemployment compensation bil pigeonholed by the Ways and Means Committee. Mr. Truman had rapped both committees for holding up his manpower reconversion measure in his wage-price speech to the aNtion Tuesday night.

Representative McCormack said he is "confident" a full employment bill will be reported by the expenditures group. McCormick said he is also "hopeful" the Ways and Means Committee will reconsider its vote tabling jobles spay legislation.

Not Defeated Yet

Slapping at House Republicans who voted in committee to sidetrack jobless pay legislation, the majority leader told newsmen:

"This bill is not defeated yet—it's just laid on the table. It seems unfortunate that there is solid Republican opposition to it.

"To recapitulate the committee vote, 10 Republicans out of 10 and four Democrats out of 14 voted to table it. In other words, 4 out of 14 Democrats voted right and no Democrats voted right.

"It seems to me its about time some of these Republicans saw the light and realized human beings need some help during reconversion."

Chairman Robert L. Doughton (D., N. C.) told newsmen he was willing to put the unemployment bill to another vote at any time, but had no information that the vote would be changed. A petition move to force the bil lto the floor will be started next week by Representative Michael J. Bradley (D., Pa.).

Omitting reference to the Ways and Means stalemate on jobless pay, the President's letter pointed up the case for Senate-passed full employment legislation, being held up in the House by extended committee hearings.

Reassurance Needed

"If this legislation could be reported out of committee so that it could be passed by the Congress by Thanksgiving, it would give that day particular significance for

Bus Strike Threatens to Spread Across U. S.

Deadline Is Met On $5,920,000,000 Business 'Stimulant'

By the Associated Press

Right on a deadline set two months ago Congress completed legislative action yesterday on a $5,920,000,000 tax reduction bill and sent it to the White House.

The Internal Revenue Bureau has to print new tax returns and withholding tables, and asked that details of the legislation be worked out by November 1.

According to revenue experts who tried to figure out the effect of the bill, int would cause these reductions in 1946:

Individual income taxpayers, $2,644,000,000.

Corporations, $3,136,000,000.

Smaller Revenue Cut Seen

Just before the Senate approved the conference report which sent the bill to the White House, Finance Committee Chairman George (D., Ga.) expressed the opinion that the actual reduction in Federal revenue will not be as great as $5,920,000,000, due to stimulation of business activity.

Senator Taft (R., Ohio) estimated that the actual loss during the current fiscal year which ends next June 30 will not exceed one billion dollars.

"There has been some criticism of making any tax reduction at a time when the country is spending more than its income," Taft observed. "The purpose of this bill is not to hand out pie to taxpayers but to encourage business activity."

The Ohioan said he believes no further business tax reductions will be possible for at least three years, but that there should be another cut in individual income taxes next year and a reduction in excise taxes.

Confident of Signature

Capitol Hill understood the bill just approved is satisfactory to the President and will be signed, although Secretary of the Treasury Vinson recommended cuts not to exceed five billion dollars.

The most important corporate tax change eliminates the wartime excess profits levy, effective January 1. All corporations also get reductions ranging from 2 to 4 per cent in their combined normal and and surtax.

Capitol Greyhound Workers Vote for Sympathy Walkout

By John F. Gerrity
Post Staff Writer.

The strike of 4000 Greyhound bus workers, tying up travel of thousands, last night threatened to spread throughout the country as labor and company officials stood firm on their original demands.

Capitol Greyhound workers, employes of the only remaining company giving Washington bus service from the West, late yesterday afternoon voted, 99 to 1, to strike in sympathy, according to Sam Barong, secretary-treasurer of the AFL union.

A walkout of Capitol Greyhound workers would affect Washington government and business employes who live in Annapolis, Lanham and Cheverly, Md., and who are dependent upon Capitol Greyhound for commuters' service.

Throughout yesterday and last night about a dozen union pickets working in shifts, paraded around the terminal at 11th st. and New York ave. nw. There was no violence and the pickets did not interfere with drivers of Greyhound's Southern division buses who are not striking.

Meanwhile, some 6000 bus passengers who normally travel out of Washington on 70 regularly scheduled daily runs left the city either by other bus lines or railroads—or were stranded.

Strike-born expedients to keep traffic moving were brought into play yesterday by company officials harassed by demands for service from servicemen and civilians.

Servicemen traveling under Government orders and on Government paid tickets were issued exchange tickets good either on the Pennsylvania Railroad or the National Trailways System.

National Trailways, which has doubled its schedules to handle the increased load, was accepting Greyhound issued tickets from civilians, Marvin E. Welsh, manager of the company, said.

In an effort to revive negotiations and end the dispute that has paralyzed Greyhound traffic in 19 States east of Chicago and north of Washington, the Labor Department's Conciliation Service announced that it "planned to take some action tomorrow."

Howard Colvin, assistant commissioner of the Conciliation Service, said that "efforts to resume conferences in Cleveland, Ohio, between the union leaders and officials of the Pennsylvania Greyhound and the Central Greyhound would be made tomorrow."

R. W. Budd, president of the Central Greyhound, told The Post

Goering's Auto Put on Display To Aid Drive

$800,000 Worth of Victory Bonds Sold On Third Day of Push

Hermann Goering's bullet-proof Mercedes automobile will go on display to Washington bond buyers today at the Capital Garage, 1314 New York ave. nw.

The District War Finance Committee announced the 1942 convertible will be ond display from 1 to 10 p. m. and Saturday from 10 a. m. to 10 p. m. under joint sponsorship of Army Ground Forces and the District War Finance Committee.

Manning the 8200-pound, 160-horsepower vehicle, which carries 70 gallons of gas in two tanks, will be Sergt. Joe Azara of Cleveland, Ohio, who captured it on a railroad siding while under fire of enemy snipers at Lausanne, Germany.

$800,000 Bond Sale

Meanwhile, officials announced Washingtonians bought $800,000 forth of Victory loan bonds yesterday, upping local sales so far to $1,400,000 on the third day of the Nation-wide campaign.

Nationally, the Treasury reported 152 million dollars in sales so far as Secretary of the Treasury Fred M. Vinson and Gen. Jonathan Wainwright urged purchase of bonds "to help us keep on guard" and as an expression of "a double Thanksgiving."

Secretary Vinson pointed out the total individual goal of four billion dollars about equals one third of the income recceived by individuals in October." The people of the United States, as a whole, can surely set aside one third of a single month's pay for investment in the victory loan."

General Wainwright called for support "to keep our enemies sup-

Army Lowers Release Score From 70-60

900,000 Additional Men Eligible for Discharge; Points For Wacs Also Cut

The Army's discharge score for enlisted men was lowered yesterday from 70 to 60, making approximately 900,000 additional soldiers eligible for release.

Anouncement that the reduction would be effective today previously had been made by Gen. George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff.

The discharge score for enlisted Wacs also was dropped from 36 to 34, but scores for all officers and nurses were left unchanged.

The Air Forces meanwhile announced that AAF enlisted men who have 50 or more points and two years of service will be discharged, providing they are classed as surplus and are in the United States.

S.urplus enlisted Wacs in the Air Forces also will be released if they have at least 29 points and a year of service.

Commands and Air Forces within the United States have been authorized to declare such personnel surplus, provided they are not actually needed and their discharge would not interfere with the release of those eligible for discharge under the 60-point rating.

Enlisted AAF men who have 50 points, but are now overseas will be eligible for discharge upon their return to this country, providing they are classed as surplus.

Point System Assailed

Action on legislation to discard the point system of discharging service personnel was sought yesterday by Representative Shafer (R., Mich.).

His bill, now before the House Military Committee, would permit all inductees to obtain their release, upon request, after two years of service.

Shafer filed a petition to require the committe to bring the measure before the House for action. He said more than 50 signatures were obtained almost immediately. In order to force action 218 signatures are required.

He called the point system "unfair," saying it failed to take into account personnel who have served in the United States "through no choice of their own," those on limited service and conscientious objectors.

250,574 in October

Army Air Force separation bases released 250,574 officers and enlisted men from service during October, Brig. Gen. Charles F. Born, of the Continental Air Forces announced yesterday.

Of this number, 59,846 were officers and 190,728 were enlisted men.

The number separated is considerably more than I anticipated at the beginning of the month," General Born said. "At the high daily rate of discharges we reached early this month, we were able to release a good many officers and men who were not scheduled for separation until November."

The 35 centers parted a total of 10,915 officers and enlisted men on October 31. Of these, 1436 were officers and 9479 were enlisted men.

MacArthur Asks Consolidation Of Nation's Fighting Forces

By Mary Spargo
Post Staff Writer.

The views of 65 high-ranking generals and admirals in the field on the question of unifying the armed forces were made public yesterday by the Senate Military Affairs Committee.

Testimony of the top-flight men in the various theaters of war was released by the White House to the Senate group. It was taken last summer and fall by a special committee of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Gens. Dwight D. Eisenhower and Douglas MacArthur headed a long list of Army commanders advocating consolidation of the armed services, but Navy chiefs were more divided in their opinions.

Admiral W. F. Halsey, commander of the Third Fleet, who favored the departmental merger when interviewed by the committee, hastened last night to issue a statement that he had changed his mind.

"In the past 12 months," Halsey said, "I have taken considerable time to ponder and reexamine the merits and demerits of a so-called combined 'Department of National Defense' as set up under a single administrative head.

"I find that now, as a combat commander, I cannot favor it."

Halsey added, "I do not for one instant contend that we should not have unified command in the geld—in the theater of operations. We should; we must."

Requirements of military security, Eisenhower pointed out, will alter with changes in the international situation. He advocated universal military training, unification of all the fighting forces and an Air Force on a part with the land and sea arms.

MacArthur advocated a single uniform for all the fighting forces.

"The experiences of this war have completely and absolutely convinced me," he said, "that there should be a complete amalgamation of the various fighting forces. I believe they should wear the same uniform. I believe there should be one family instead of three."

Complete amalgamation, MacArthur held, is necessary to remove "the deadly animosities" which now exist between the services. He urged that prospective officers be trained in all three branches, land, air and sea, for

British Send Planes to Raid Indonesians

Extremists Continue To Resist Despite Plea of Soekarno

Batavia, Nov. 1 (AP).—British planes struck at Indonesian extremists stepping up their attacks tonight against British forces in central and western Java despite orders from their own "President" Soekarno to lay down arms.

With fighter-plane aid, the thin-spread Indian troops recaptured most of Magelang, 260 miles southwest of Batavia. At least three Thunderbolts went into action, shooting up three staff cars and as many trucks, after the Indonesians opened fire with mortars.

A British spokesman described the situation as "close to war." A squadron of tanks arrived at still-tense Soerabaja, naval base where Brig. A. W. F. Mallaby was slain Tuesday night.

Soekarno Meets Dutch

Soekarno, head of the "Indonesian Republic," met with Dutch leaders last night, and flew today into the interior in a yet unsuccessful mission to make his followers stop fighting.

Tonight he was believed to be at Jogjakarta, headquarters of youthful extremists who were said to be sending reinforcements to Indonesians near Magelang, 30 miles to the north.

Last night Soekarno conferred with acting Lieut. Gov. Hubertus Van Mook. The Dutch information service here said Van Mook urged cooperation as serving the best interests of all concerned, and that Soekarno presented arguments for recognition of a de facto government headed by himself.

(The Dutch information service at The Hague announced that if Van Mook had conferred with Soekarno, he had "acted against the express wish and instructions of the government" since the government holds there is no common ground for discussions with the Indonesian leader.)

Seek Rebel Stations

Soekarno stopped today at Semarang, 40 miles northwest of Magelang, and attempted unsuccessfully to persuade Brigadier Richard Bethel to accompany him to Jogjakarta.

A British army spokesman said that intelligence had been trying to locate Indonesian rebel stations which were inciting natives to vio-

4 Die, 8 Hurt In Palestine as Revolt Flares

Armed Jews Blamed For Cutting Roads, Sinking Police Boat

Jerusalem, Nov. 1 (AP).—Renewed violence broke out in Palestine today with four or five persons killed and eight injured by attacks on railroads and police launches in two harbors.

A British military communique blamed the attacks upon Jews, but did not name any specific group.

Maj. Gen. John D'Arcy, British commander in Palestine, banned movement of all motor traffic on highways between 10 p. m. and 6 a. m., except in municipal areas.

The attackers cut railway lines at approximately 50 places throughout the length and breadth of the country, exploded one police launch in Jaffa port and seriously damaged two others anchored at Haifa. The vessels had been mined.

The British communique listed these casualties:

One British soldier dead and one wounded; one Palestine policeman killed, one believed killed and one wounded; two Palestine railway staff workers killed and six wounded, one critically.

The only arrests announced were of five armed Jews captured by police after a train was held up between Jerusalem and Lydda, about 25 miles to the northwest.

Military authorities said they were conducting an exhaustive investigation in all parts of Palestine.

(In London the Arab office issued a statement asserting the outbreak was "the work of the Zionists," and accusing Zionist leaders of trying "to force the British government into decisions in favor of the Jews."

(The statement said that if widespread revolt develops "it will be a revolt of the Zionists against the Palestine government and not a civil war between Arabs and Jews.")

Nimitz to Succeed King, Papers Say

Superforts Make Hop of 6553 Miles In 27 Hours

Plane No. 2 Blows Out Tires On Landing at National Airport

The first plane put down at 7:37, exactly 27 hours and 28 minutes after taking off on 6553-mile hop.

The second plane blew two tires as it landed and swerved across the runway but was brought to a stop safely. The third ship landed without incident.

The fourth plane touched its wheels on the runway at 8:16. It was forced to circle the airstrip while a transport plane landed.

Take Off From Hokkaido

The planes took off from Mizitani Field, Hokkaido, northernmost of the Japanese home islands, at 4:09 p. m. (EST), Wednesday.

The flight distance from Hakkaido to Washington is 6553 miles. Each plane took off with 10,580 gallons of gasoline.

The flight was commanded by Brig. Gen. Frank A. Armstrong, Jr., 43, of Richmond, Va., deputy commander of the Twentieth Air Force, and former wing commander of the Eighth Air Force in England. He won the Distinguished Service Cross for gallantry in a raid over Amsterdam in 1943.

On September 19, three B-29s tried a nonstop flight from Japan to Washington, but ran into headwinds and were forced by lack of gasoline to land at Chicago. All three continued here after refueling, landing at the National Airport just 29 hours and 52 minutes after taking off from Hokkaido.

Crewmen taking part in the second flight are all highpoint men eligible for discharge under the Army point system.

Record Held by British

The Army Air Forces did not announce the flight until yesterday afternoon after the planes had passed Winnipeg, Canada, at 2:07 p. m., EST.

The world's nonstop, long-distance record was established in 1938 by two British aircraft, flying from Egypt to Apstralia, a distance of 7148 miles.

The B-29 mission flew the Great Circle route across the Pacific via Agattu to Kodiak, iStka, Port St. John, Winnepeg, Detroit and Washington.

All four of thre Superforts had been assigned to the 315th Wing of the Twentieth Air Force, and had taken part in dropping supplies to prisoners of war during the initial days of the Japanese surrender.

Plane No. 2 was piloted by Capt. Howard J. Fry, 25, whose mother, Mrs. Pearl Fry, lives at 1935 Summit pl. ne. Prior to entering the Army, Captain Fry was employed here with the Office of Emergency Management.

Other Washington area men on the flight included the commander of plane No. 3, Col. Kenneth O. Sanborn, Annapolis, Md., and Lieut. Col. Robert L. Gould, Locust Vale, Towson, Md., aboard the same ship.

Naval Lieutenant Found Wounded, Dies in Hospital

Lieut. Farnsley C. Woodward, USNR, 43, died at Emergency Hospital at 5:55 p. m. yesterday, almost an hour after he was found in a basement lavatory at McLean Gardens with a bullet wound in the right temple.

He was found unconscious by a janitor, Roger Williams, 1017 15th st. ne., at 5 p. m. He was taken to Emergency Hospital in a Fire Department ambulnace and was pronounced dead at 5:55.

Woodward's body was lying atop a .32-caliber pistol from which, police said, one bullet had been discharged. A bullet was found in a wall alongside the body. It apparently had passed completely through the right temple.

A note was found on the body directing that all his property be given his wife, Mrs. Julia Woodward.

U. S. May Quit Capital Garage

35,000 D. C. Parking Spaces Have to Serve 200,000 Cars

By James E. Chinn
Post Staff Writer

There are 200,000 potential parkers in the metropolitan area and only 35,000 on and off street places to park in the central business section.

This fact was developed by the traffic subcommittee of the House District Committee which doggedly set out yesterday to break the automobile parking space jam in downtown Washington. Other facts developed:

1. The Government is ready to abandon the Capital Garage at 1312 New York ave. nw., so it can be returned to public use immediately, if the owner will scrap the lease.

2. Garages beneath the public parks are feasible and practical, but costly.

3. Concrete results can be expected soon from the reactivated Motor Vehicle Parking Agency created by Congress in 1942 to establish and operate or lease off street-parking facilities.

Surrounded by the District's park, planning and traffic experts, Chairman F. Edward Hebert (D., La.) served notice that the single objective of the committee at this time is "to get something crystallized" toward solution of the acute parking problem—that other traffic matters would be given attention later.

"We have got to determine where to put the cars," he declared. "We can't keep filling up a bottleneck."

Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, veteran District highway director, vigorously agreed. "There have been too many surveys and too little action," he said. "What we need is action."

Captain Whitehurst told the committee that various suggestions for relieving the parking situation such as squeezing out an additional curb space here and there would "only doctor the patient, not cure him." The newborn parking agency has the remedy, he said, and will administer it as soon as it perfects a program and gets some money.

Although underground garages are feasible, Captain Whitehurst said he would not recommend them for all day parkers because the high cost of construction would require a fee beyond the average car owner's pocketbook. For the "transient" parker, however, he declared, the subsurface garage is economically "sound."

The highway director emphasized that the District did not intend to go into the garage business, but merely proposed to "lead the way" for private operators. He questioned, however, the legality of leasing government owned park lands to private operators to develop underground garages.

The square adjoining Franklin Park, bounded by 12th and 13th and I and K sts. nw., was cited by Captain Whitehurst as a "suit-

For Economy, Efficiency

Truman Gets Byrd's Program For Agency Reorganization

Senator Harry F. Byrd (D., Va.), submitted to President Truman yesterday a four-phase program for undertaking reorganization of the executive branch of the Government under legislation pending in the Senate, authorizing the Chief Executive to initiate changes for economy, efficiency and simplicity.

The Senator said the war-inflated Federal Government needs reorganization now more than ever before, and expressed the hope that the new legislation will allow sweeping reorganization of a constructive nature.

He pointed out that Federal civilian personnel at present totals 3,649,769 compared with 932,953 in August, 1939, and 917,760 on Armistice Day, 1918, and suggested that these Federal payrolls be reduced to approximately one million employes. The Senator invited special attention to the fact that there are 848,644 civilian employes outside the Continental United States.

The Byrd memorandum outlined fields of activity to which he said reorganization could be applied for the mutual benefit of the public and the Government.

Byrd, chairman of the Joint Committee on Reduction of Nonessential Expenditures, told the President that the program represented his own personal views.

The four steps he recommended would—

1. "Place all executive agencies under Cabinet control."

2. "Provide uniformity within departmental organization."

3. "Effect consolidation and co-

I Still Love That Man

Man Wins $15,000 for Losing Wife's Love; She Helps Him

An assistant to the manager of the Cosmos Club was awarded a $15,000 alienation of affections verdict in District Court yesterday.

His former wife went to bat for him, testifying, "I still love that man."

The suit for damages was brought by Lee D. Birdsong, 50, 1725 H st. nw., against Hjalmar P. Eclov, 53, a WPB clerk, of 1301 Concord ave. nw., for alienation of his wife's affections between March 1942 and June 1944.

Mrs. Thelma Moore Birdsong, 49, was divorced from her husband in Miami on May 8, 1944, on grounds of extreme cruelty.

Birdsong asked $150,000 damages on three counts against Eclov. They were: (1) Alienation of affections, (2) loss of consortium (comfort, companionship, and cooperation of his wife), and (3) misconduct (criminal compensation) with his wife.

The wife, a grandmother, and said to be living with friends in Virginia, took the witness stand, pointed to the plaintiff and declared, "I love than man. I still love him."

A contested point was whether the defendant and Thelma Birdsong spent the night of December 9, 1942, at a Silver Spring, Md. hotel. She testified that she had spent the night with Eclov, the defendant, on the other hand, refused to deny that he and Mrs. Birdsong had registered that night as "R. E. Adams and wife." He said that he left the hotel upon signing in, went to a friend's house in Takoma Park to play cards, and then went directly home.

21 Directors Of 6 German Banks Seized

Frankfurt, Germany, Nov. 1 (AP).—Twenty-one directors of Germany's six greatest banks have been arrested on charges that they worked hand-in-glove with the Nazi Party "in a conspiracy to dominate the world," financing Hitler's armies and helping exploit conquered nations, U. S. Army authorities announced today.

Twenty other tycoons of the powerful banks are sought.

"It seems pretty sure that we will recommend trial of these men as war criminals," declared R. A. Nixon, deputy director of the military government division investigating cartels.

War Trials Loom

Nixon said the directors of the "Big Six" banks began pouring money into German rearmament as early as 1935, and during the war "served as virtual spies in the economic and political fields."

He liste dthe six banks as the Deutsche Bank, the Dresdener Bank, the Commerzbank, the Bank Der Deutschen-Arbeit, the Reichs Kredit-Gesellschaft and the Berliner Handels Gesellschaft.

"There is a strong presumption, based on our preliminary investigation, that these six big German banks have been guilty of such war crimes as employment of slave labor in the industries they controlled, the imposition of excessive occupation costs and plunder and spoliation of public and private property," Nixon said. "Without any doubt they contributed substantially to the preparation and waging of aggressive warfare."

Soviets Seize Property

In Berlin, meanwhile, Marshal Georgi K. Zhukov ordered the seizure of all properties of the German State, Nazi Party members and "influential adherents," German military authorities and organizations, and forbidden and disbanded business organizations, in the Soviet zone of occupation.

millions of American families who remember only two well the dark days of the depression, and want reassurance that we shall never again have another 1932," Truman wrote McCormack.

He said he felt people in every State favor the legislation "and are looking for their Congress to act."

"There are some who say, 'Let's wait and see what happens.' Such a course would be the height of recklessness. We must look ahead. If we wait for protracted mass unemployment to come upon us, we face another disaster. To no major situation has it been more applicable that 'an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure.'

Workers Expect Action

"It is time that the people be reassured by Congress that the Government stands for full employment, full production and prosperity, not unemployment and relief."

Mr. Truman said he has talked to hundreds and hundreds of veterans: "These men and women who have worked and fought to defend our American institutions expect us to take the steps necessary to translate their victory on the battlefield to peacetime jobs with security and opportunity."

Football players Bill Poling, Patty McCarthy, Vic Turyn and Joe Pietrowski are expected to report as soon as the grid season is completed.

Police Raid Delayed as Dog Stands Guard

From Yesterday's Late Editions

A determined chow dog temporarily delayed a police raid on an alleged numbers establishment at 1842 2d st. nw. yesterday.

Detective Sergt. Howard E. Ogle, one of the raiders, got into the back yard of the suspected place and found that he was alone with a chow dog—a very unfriendly chow dog.

Ogle scrambled to the top of a 10-foot fence. The dog was finally tied down and the raid went on as scheduled.

Police arrested Joseph A. Chase, 40, a Negro, living at the 2d st. address and charged him with possession of lottery slips and with operating a lottery.

Police said they also seized a large quantity of lottery slips and three adding machines.

Chase, who was released in $1500 bond, will appear before U. S. Commissioner Needham C. Turnage today.

Earlier in the day gambling cases against two men arrested last month at the United Nations Social Club, 1132 18th st. nw., were dismissed by Turnage.

The men were Dan "Nick" Nichols, 66, 1800 block of M st. nw., and Frank W. Jones, 43, 520 E st. ne. Jones remained charged with possessing lottery slips and was granted a jury trial for November 28 after pleading not guilty to the charge.

Another Decrease Noted; War Toll Now 1,068,794

The Nation's war casualty toll dropped 409 yesterday to a total of 1,068,794, chiefly because of the return of missing men.

The Army reported 922,65 casualties and the Navy 146,139.

Army casualties and those reported a week ago: Killed, 217,569 and 216,966; wounded, 571,442 and 571,330; missing, 18,311 and 18,655; prisoners, 115,333 and 115,784.

Of the Army prisoners, 107,444 have ben exchanged or returned to military control.

Major Jimmy Wins AtChurchill Downs

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 1 (AP).—Backed from 15 to 5 to 1, J. B. Rigney's Major Jimmy scored a mild upset in accounting for today's Peewee Valley Purse at Churchill Downs.

Taking command at the far turn, the chestnut son of Hairan maintained his advantage under pressure to hold off the belated rush of W. H. Kelly, from the T. C. Melrose Stable, by a nose. The latter, in turn, beat J. A. Kinnard's Zig Zag a head for the place to complete the blanket finish.

Th ewinner, ridden by Jockey Frank Truschka, stepped the six furlongs in 1:12 3/5 over a fast track. The real feature of the dya's racing, however, was the riding of Jockey Terry Sullivan, who scored a triple on Tetramore in the third, Epi-Queen in the fourth and Victory Play in the fifth.

Lack of Dublin Pubs Worries Irish Firm

Dublin, Nov. 1 (AP).—The Dublin City Corp. is worried about the difficulty Irishmen are having in getting a drink.

There is now one pub in Dublin for every 776 persons, compared with one for every 230 before people began moving out of the slum areas.

The corporation is considering building some more pubs in better locations. It figures on a profit of four million dollars in assuaging Irish thirsts.

76,859 Yanks Remain In United Kingdom

London, Nov. 1 (U.P.).—There are only 76,859 American soldiers stationed in the United Kingdom compared to the peak of 1,526,965 during the war, American authorities disclosed today. They also announced the return to the British of 10 permanent hospitals and several large depots.

Luxurious Home Of Angarita Seen By Newspapermen

Caracas, Venezuela, Nov 1 (U.P.).—Deposed president Gen. Isaias Medina Angarita kept 23 servants in his luxurious private residence which cost $2,500,000 to build and furnish, and his household expenses amounted to $250 a day, it was revealed today.

Newspapermen were taken on a tour of Medina's home. He was overthrown by a revolution of young Army officers and Socialist civilians October 19.

Provisional Interior Minister Valmore Rodriguez—a newspaperman himself—conducted the tour.

The house on La Barraca hill, popularly known as the "House of the Thousand Statues," was built by Medina after he became president. It is some two years old.

The newspaper El Pals's reporter counted 96 portraits of Medina in the house.

Fear Expressed Atom Bomb Tests Doom Vital Fish

By the Associated Press

Officials of the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service expressed concern yesterday that the Navy's ocean tests of the atomic bomb might destroy large numbers of commercial important fish.

Elmer Higgins, chief fishery biologist of the Fish and Wildlife Service, said the concussion from underwater explosions of dynamite kills sea life within thousands of feet.

"It is assumed," Higgins said in an interview, "that the atom bomb explosion will be the most potent that ever has occurred in the sea. In addition to the concussion, it is likely that radio activity started by the bomb will be deadly to the fish."

It would be difficult, Higgins continued, to designate a time and place for the least destruction to sea life because little is known about the spawning season and migration habits of some important Pacific fish, notably the tuna.

Ex-Playboy Sentenced To 7 Years in Prison

New York, Nov. 1 (AP).—Thomas M. Gorman, 43, onetime Broadway playboy who pleaded guilty to income tax evasion and over-ceiling prices liquor sales, received two prison sentences of 3½ years each today, the sentences to run concurrently.

Gorman, former husband of Natalie Guggenheim, copper heiress, appeared before Judge Harold M. Kennedy in U. S. Federal Court, Brooklyn, and received the first sentence. He also was fined $10,000. It was charged he failed to pay $935,000 in income taxes due in 1943. Federal Judge Grover Moscowitz in Manhattan gave Gorman the second prison sentence for violating price ceilings.

U. S. Bombs Destroyed 2 Million Jap Homes

Tokyo, Nov. 1 (AP).—Air raids destroyed nearly 2,500,000 buildings in Japan, including two million structures classified as "residences," the Ministry of Welfare informed Allied headquarters today.

Bombs, including two atomic missiles, wiped out 330,000 military, government, industrial and commercial buildings, the report stated. Another 10,000 were damaged and 1-00,000 residences damaged.

Slayer of 116 Japanese Back From PrisonCamps

San Francisco, Nov. 1 (AP).—Bataan's "one-man army," the famed Maj. Arthur Wermuth, credited with killing 116 Japanese singlehanded, came home today from the war and from enemy prison camps.

He met his mother, Mrs. Clara Wermuth of Chicago who, with his sister, Talia, have been here for days awaiting him. His wife, Jean, will meet him at Traverse City, Mich.

Daughter of Jailed Nazi Tries Suicide

Wiesbaden, Germany, Nov. 1 (U.P.).—Molina Dittmar, daughter of the captive Lieut. Gen. Kurt Dittmar, former German high command radio commentator, attempted to commit suicide by leaping through a window while being questioned at Oberammergau, it was reported today.

Miss Rittmar was arrested while posing as a Latvian refugee. American authorities said she admitted she held the rank of captain in the SS Women's Auxiliary.

Deaf Mute Testified He Answered Door Bell

London, Nov. 1 (U.P.).—Deaf mute H. Scott testified in a minor case before the Acton Court that he answered a ring at the doorbell. An attorney asked how Scott could hear a doorbell. Scott explained through an interpreter that he couldn't hear it, he saw it. When a caller pushes the button, he releases a spring hammer. The hammer bats a table tennis ball across theroom. Scott sees the ball and opens the door.

Georgia Gives Full Pardon to Noted Fugitive

Atlanta, Nov. 1 (AP).—The long-time, celebrated fugitive from a Georgia chain gang, Robert Elliott Burns, surrendered today and two hours later, in tears, he heard himself pronounced a free man.

The three-member board of pardons and paroles wiped away the unserved part of a 6 to 10-year sentence for a $5 stick-up that has hung over the now successful business man for 23 years.

It also restored civil and political rights to the twice-fugitive who aroused a storm of protest in Georgia over his book and movie, "I Am a Fugitive From a Georgia Chain-Gang."

Tears streamed down the ruddy, bespectacled face of the slight, graying prisoner when the order was read pronouncing him free.

"You will not be sorry," he told Chairman Edward B. Everett and other members of the board.

An hour before he had heard young Ellis Arnall, whose administration wiped out the chain gang system which Burns wrote about so bitterly, plead his case.

"I have never appeared before this board with such a request," the Governor said. "And I shall probably never do so again. But I am convinced this man is completely rehabilitated."

In all, Burns has served less than two years of his sentence. The first time he escaped after two months. Seven years later he was revealed as a fugitive by a wife who was divorcing him.

He had become a successful magazine publisher in Chicago. He fought extradition, obtained a habeas corpus writ. Then he voluntarily returned to Georgia—promised, he said, he'd serve only 90 days.

He served more than a year. He told the board he felt he'd been duped. He escaped again. His business had collapsed. He started life anew in New Jersey.

There he was given refuge under three Governors, who refused to grant extradition. He married again. He has three children. He is a civic leader.

In New Jersey, Mrs. Burns said, "thank God it's all over. All we want to do now is live a normal life."

CIVIL RIGHTS RESTORED—Robert Elliott Burns (standing, right foreground), for 23 years a fugitive from a Georgia chain gang, is handed the papers that legally restored his civil rights. Burns was pardoned after Gov. Ellis Arnall appealed in his behalf. Edward D. Everett, chairman of the Georgia Pardon Board, hands the papers to Burns. Truman Wants Reparations To End Japs' Power for War

President Truman declared yesterday that the reparations program for Japan will be designed "to put an end for all time to Japanese aggression."

Mr. Truman's statement was issued in connection with the expected departure this week for Japan of Edwin W. Pauley, the President's personal representative on reparation matters.

Pauley told White House reporters Wednesday that the personal fortune of Emperor Hirohito, estimated in excess of 100 million dollars, would be included in Japanese assets which may be taken as reparations for war damages.

The President said Pauley and his staff, most of whom were scheduled to leave yesterday, will work in close cooperation with Gen. Douglas MacArthur and utilize surveys made by MacArthur's industrial experts.

The President's statement follows:

"The problem of what to do with Germany and Japan is one of the greatest challenges in the whole effort to achieve lasting peace.

Purpose Outlined

"The program for reparations from Germany which was developed by Ambassador Pauley and adopted at the Berlin conference will go a long way toward helping us achieve complete victory over Germany, by depriving her of the means ever again to wage another war. The reparations program which Ambassador Pauley will develop for Japan will be directed toward the same fundamental goal—to put an end for all time to Japanese aggression.

"In carrying out this mission for me Ambassador Pauley and his staff will work in close cooperation with General MacArthur and his staff and will make full use of the surveys which have already been made by the industrial experts now on General MacArthur's staff."

The President at the same time made public the names of the other members of the reparations mission as follows:

Commission Personnel

Members of the reparations commission are: Martin T. Bennett, chief of the industry division of the Foreign Economic Administration; Lieut. Col. Gail S. Carter, Santa Fe, N. Mex., as assistant chief of secretariat, United States reparations delegations; Arthur G. Coons, Los Angeles, dean of faculty and acting president of Occidental College, Los Angeles; Josiah E. Dubois, jr., Camden, N. J., assistant to the Secretary of Treasury.

Dr. Luther H. Gulick, New York, director of the Institute of Public Administration of New York City; J. P. Hurndall, Altadena, Calif., petroleum engineer and geologist; David R. Jenkins, New York, economist in the Treasury's monetary research division; William Green Johnston, member of the firm of Johnston and Johnston, Houston, Tex., and Oklahoma City, Okla., oil firm; Stanley Joiner, Santa Fe, N. Mex., formerly connected with Southern Union Gas Co.; Charles Karl, Arlington, Va., member of secretariat of the United States delegation; Owen Lattimore, Baltimore, Md., director of the Pace School of International Relations, Johns Hopkins University, and former political adviser to Chiang Kai-shek; Sergt. John Mattles, New York, a member of the United States delegation secretariat; H. D. Maxwell, Tacoma, Wash., president of Maxwell Petroleum Co., and Benjamin Olsen, Salt Lake City, another member of the delegation's secretariat.

British Dock Strike's End Is Believed Near

London, Nov. 1 (U.P.).—An indication that Britain's month-long dock strike might end soon was seen as workers voted today on the return to work question following recommendations of strike leaders to resume normal operations at all ports by Monday.

A favorable vote would send an estimated 43,000 longshoremen back to work and release approximately 20,000 soldiers who have been doing their work.

Minnie Godfrey, 64, was scratched on both arms, hands and one leg while playing with her pet cat yesterday, police reported. She was treated at Emergency Hospital.

Baruch Urges Allies Control Enemy Scientists

Presidential adviser Bernard M. Baruch cautioned yesterday that the Allies must keep tight control of German and Japanese scientific resources to prevent another war.

Testifying before a joint Senate commerce and military affairs subcommittee, he said the United States must adopt universal military training and strive constantly to increase its "scientific brainpower" if it is to be prepared against future aggression.

He urged creation of a permanent government agency to conduct "unflagging, intensive scientific research" during peacetime. This agency, he said, also could be used for "effective policing of the war-geared science of Germany and Japan."

"Be assured," he said, "that the Germans and Japanese will strive unceasingly through science, technology and engineering to devise some means for waging a third world war. The control of the scientific resources of Germany and Japan must continue for many years after the last occupation troops leave these lands—until there has been a spiritual rebirth of those peoples."

Points to Deficit

Baruch criticized Selective Service for not continuing the deferments of young scientists. Pointing out that the war already has left a large deficit of scientific manpower, he said:

"With the war over, one would think this draining of potential scientific talent would stop. Yet the deferments of many young scientists have been canceled and these young men taken into the service."

Vital as it is, he said, scientific research alone is not enough for preparedness, and "if the people fall victim to any such notion they will be inviting a terrible calamity." Just as important, he said, is a system of universal training which will "convert our Nation in quickest order to the conditions of any possible future war."

He asserted that this country's stake in preparedness is large because unless the United States is strong "the United Nations organization will lack the strength to enforce the peace."

Should Not Be Tempted

"At no future time," he said, "must potential aggressors be temped to gamble on a blitzkrieg that would seek to overwhelm us with new or old weapons of destruction before our mobilization could be made complete and effective."

Baruch recommended an eight-point scientific preparedness program calling for stimulation and encouragement of scientific talent; continued military research in new weapons; stronger warfare against disease; conservation of our natural resources; stimulation of basic scientific research; broad dissemination of scientific information; creation of a Government agency for scientific advancement, and guidance by the agency for international exchange of scientific knowledge.

Post's Face Red Over 'Budding Magnolias'

The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Magnolias, half a dozen botanists and scores of local gardners called yesterday to say:

That the picture of a lovely girl surrounded by "budding magnolias" in yesterday's Post was in error since, as nearly everybody knows, magnolias bloom only once a year even in tropical countries.

That the "buds" were actually seed pods.

That they are nothing unusual for this time of year, regardless of the weather.

That the reporter should immediately take a course in botany. (Tell that to Interior's Public Relations Office, too.)

The Post's face is as red as a magnolia seed.

Elsewher on the weather front:

Forecasters at the Weather Bureau say yesterday's cooler weather was only a temporary break in the autumn heat wave. It'll be back up into the 70s today and remain there throughout the weekend.

No really cold weather is in sight. (The Weather Bureau's vision extends through next Tuesday.)

Walter H. Shedfield, assistant chief of the horticultural branch of National Capital Parks, a gentleman who knows all about flowers, including magnolias, says that if you want to see authentic spring blooms in November, the following samples are now available:

Indian azaleas at Bryan Memorial on Constitution ave.; one lilac bush near 15th and C sts. sw.; Japanese quince at Hains Point; forsythia at many places.

And we still think we saw one dandelion, four wild strawberries and many buttercups at Lincoln Memorial—but no magnolia.

Youth Caught After Chase Of Stolen Car

A 17-year-old Negro was arrested yesterday following a wild, mile-a-minute police chase of a stolen car through crowded downtown streets shortly after 2 p. m.

The youth was one of two persons in the stolen car. A second man escaped.

Traffic Car No. 3, manned by Policemen F. M. Webber and V. R. Locke, took up the chase when the stolen car, a red Pontiac sedan, raced through a red light at 6th and D sts. nw.

Pedestrians Periled

The car careened widly south on 6th st., narrowly missing cars and pedestrians. At Pennsylvania ave. the car turned left, passed trolleys on the wrong side and then turned north on 3rd st. At Indiana ave. the driver turned left again and sped in front of Police Headquarters.

There the driver almost lost control of the car. It jumped on the sidewalk, flattened some shrubs on the lawn of the Municipal Center and almost struck Pvt. D. W. Miller of the Vice Squad. The driver gained partial control of the car and escaped going over a parapet which would have meant a 10-foot drop into a parking area.

At this point, Traffic Car No. 1 and a headquarters car, both parked in front of Police Headquarters, joined in the chase.

The three police cars pursued the stolen machine to 3d st. and Constitution ave. west on the avenue and then north on 6th st. At 9th st. and New York ave., the driver of the car pulled it into a parking lot and he and his companion fled on foot.

The 17-year-old ran to 7th st. where he was captured.

Police said the car was the property of Earl M. Shanahan, of 58 W st. nw., and had been stolen from a gas station at 6th st. and Massachusetts ave. nw. shortly before the chase. Police were unable to determine which of the two was the driver.

Man Reenlists Rather Than Pay Fees to Union

Salt Lake City, Nov. 1 (AP).—Myron F. Oliver wasn't "just kidding" when he said he would rather go back into the Army than pay union fees to hold his job.

Oliver, who was discharged October 12 after 5½ years service with the Army, 16 months of it in the Pacific, reenlisted yesterday as a master sergeant.

He said he had been offered a promotion at the sheet metal shop where he worked but was informed he would have to pay a $50 initiation fee to an AFL union first. "I objected to earning the job and then paying for it," Oliver said.

"I talked it over with my wife and decided I would rather go back to the Army."

Second Michigan Woman Dies Mysteriously

Pontiac, Mich., Nov. 1 (AP).—This area's second woman victim of death under mysterious circumstances within a three-week period was identified today as Alberta Rose Young, 35, wife of an Air Forces captain.

Fellow workers at a Detroit tool and die shop made the identification at a mortuary here 24 hours after Mrs. Young's body, a bullet wound in the head, was found floating in the nearby Clinton River. Mrs. Young had been missing since Tuesday.

Mrs. Estelle McFarland, 33, was found yesterday on the floor of her gas-filled kitchen at 620 North Carolina ave. se. She was pronounced dead by Dr. Richard Gitter of the Casualty Hospital staff. The body was discovered by her husband, William J. McFarland.

Report Shows Prices Need Not Rise With Pay

A Commerce Department report says wages can rise substantially without any corresponding increase in prices.

The report deals chiefly with the automobile industry.

In this industry, says the report, wages can be increased as much as 25 per cent within the next two years and profits still may be three times larger than in the 1936-1939 period.

Said the report, which was prepared by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce:

"Even with a 25 per cent wage increase (in the automobile industry), and some increase in materials costs, profits three times larger than in the 1936-1939 period can be expected, on sales two and one-half times as large.

Base of Calculations

"The years 1936-1939 are used as a reference here because they serve as the base in calculations for the excess profits tax and were used by OPA in developing profit margins for price setting."

Continuing to discuss the automobile industry, the report said:

"While sales next year, exclusive of military products, will probably be about 8 per cent below 1941, profits accrued from these sales would be approximately one third lower. Profits before taxes would, however, still be higher than in any year prior to 1941.

"The increase in materials costs in the past four years and the rise in wages, past and forecast, explain next year's profit position relative to 1941. At the same time it should be remembered that 1941 was an extraordinary profit year, not only because of the large production but also because of substantial price increases."

Rise in Profits

The report presented these general findings:

"1. For a given set of cost assumptions in a particular year, profits rise much more rapidly than production. Thus, a six-fold increase in production will yield a profit 13 times higher. The differential is naturally much larger between the extremes and tends to diminish at the higher levels of output.

"2. Nineteen hundred and forty-two model prices are high enough to yield profits at low volumes of output—even with the high wage and materials costs assumed for 1947. Profits would be made from the manufacturing process with a two-million-car output.

"3. Prices that would yield profits at low utilization of capacity have been characteristic of this industry. The automotive groups have experienced a loss in only one year—1932."

Must Meet Costs

Vice Admiral Ross T McIntyre, Navy surgeon general, appealed to citizens to buy "up to the limit of our resources" in order to pay costs of medical service for disabled veterans, some of whom will need care "the remainder of their lives."

The District War Finance Committee revealed that $500,000 of total sales purchases so far here have been in Series E purchases, 1.8 cent of the 27-million-dollar E bond quota. The District's overall quota for the drive is 85 million dollars.

Meanwhile, four Government agencies reported sales completing their quotas: Federal Public Housing Authority, $87,000 or 101 per cent of quota; Federal Housing Administration, $76,739 or 106 per cent of quota; Agricultural Adjustment Administration, $53,287 or 146 per cent of quota, and Office of the National Housing Administrator, $24,148 or 100 per cent of quota.

Student Rally Held

More than 2000 student at Roosevelt High School opened the public school campaign with a rally toward raising a quota of $150,000 in memory of 60 former students who died in this war. Mrs. Howard S. LeRoy, chairman of the education committee of the District War Finance Committee, told students $600,000 worth of bonds already have been bought in previous bond drives at Roosevelt.

complete understanding of an integrated war.

When interviewed last December, Admiral Chester Nimitz said:

"I favor a single civilian secretary of the armed forces, with a complete elimination of civilian secretaries for the Army, for the Navy and for the Air Forces with the idea of reducing any tendency to separatism."

Nimitz has since revised this position. In the meantime the Navy Department has taken an official stand in opposition to the proposed unification.

Vice Admiral Marc C. Mitscher was said he was in favor of a unified department for the military services. He said he agreed with Admiral Harry E. Yarnell, one of the original advocates of the proposal.

In theg course of the interview with the committee from the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Mitscher declared that this country has "an inferiority complex" about fighting.

"I think we are suffering from an inferiority complex when it comes to fighting because we can fight better than the other nations and we don't know it."

Gens. Ira Eaker, Mark Clark and Omar Bradley were among those calling for a single department for the military forces.

Vice Admiral J. S. McCain warned that any such step should be taken very slowly but predicted that it would be necessary to have a separate Department of Air.

Spruance Is Opposed

Admiral R. A. Spruance, commander of the Fifth Fleet, opposed merger proposals. He urged that the Joint Chiefs of Staff be continued in peacetime and advocated more effective coordination with the State Department.

Admiral Harold R. Stark, head of American Naval Forces in Europe, declared he was not sure it would be wise to establish a separate air force.

Stark told the committte about his advocacy before Congressional committees of the value of maintaining men in the Army and Navy rather than having them on relief.

"I had to throw that out," he said, "but I think that it is something we ought to keep in mind."

Golden Dipt has come to Washington

It's a Labor Saver for Meal Makers

Cooks all over the country long since discovered Golden Dipt saved them time and labor and improved their fried dishes. Now, it is offered to Washington housewives, who will promptly recognize its surprising merit.

Golden Dipt is a ready-to-use prepared breading mixture that eliminates all the bother of batter making in preparing fried foods. Roll the pieces of meat, seafood, fish or poultry in Golden Dipt and drop them in the skillet or fryer. That's all there is to it. When the food is a delicious, golden brown it's done.

The milk and eggs and seasoning are all in it. Comes in 6 oz. and 10 oz. shaker top sound cartons. Needs no refrigeration. Stays fresh indefinitely.

at groceries and fish and meat counters.

Golden Dipt has been tested and approved by the American Culinary Federation.

ductions eliminate 12 million persons from the rolls.

Payers of the 3 per cent normal tax are given the same exemptions as for the graduated surtax—$500 apiece for the taxpayer and each dependent. The rate in each surtax bracket is cut by 3 percentage points, and after computing the total tax obligation, the taxpayer is allowed to knock off 5 per cent.

Enlisted men will be forgiven Federal income taxes on their service pay for the war years, beginning in 1941, and officers will be given an additional three years to pay to their back taxes without penalty.

The social security payroll tax is held for another year at the current rate of 1 per cent each on employers and employes. Had Congress not included that provision, the rate would have jumped automatically to 2½ per cent January 1, under the social security law.

yesterday that the company had made its top offer of 5.4 cents a mile for drivers and they would not budge from that figure.

Although union leaders announced that they would appeal to the Labor Department to intervene to end the deadlock, Colvin said that there was little likelihood that Labor Secretary Schwellenbach would step in until he "was satisfied that the Conciliation Service could do no more to end the strike."

The 4000 drivers and maintenance workers—including 375 men of the Washington branch—walked out midnight Wednesday when arbitration efforts collapsed.

While no immediate estimate of the number of passengers affected was made, company officials said that Pennsylvania Greyhound and Central Greyhound, alone, hauled between 40,000 and 50,000 persons daily.

The paramount issue in the strike is wages. The men, members of the Amalgamated Street Railway and Motor Coach Employes Union, are demanding 5.75 cents a mile for drivers and a 30 per cent increase for maintenance workers.

The company has offered 5.4 cents a mile for drivers and a flat 15 cents an hour raise for other workers.

able" location for an underground because of its topography. Here, he said, a garage could be built that would have two subsurface, ramp-connected levels on the I st. side, and three on the K st. side, or two levels and a roof.

Ernest E. Hall, executive officer of the Federal Works Agency, which operates the Capital Garage, testified the Government would be willing to vacate it immediately if the owner would cancel the lease. The National Mortgage & Investment Corp., agents for the owner, he said, have indicated they "might" be interested in taking back the garage next June 30.

The Government's five-year lease, he explained, will not expire until June 30, 1948, or six months after the end of the national emergency is proclaimed.

Annual Rent $134,925

Hall said the Government pays an annual rental of $134,925 and maintenance expenses last year amounted to $36,000.

"What is the assessed value of the garage?" asked Representative George J. Bates (R., Mass.).

Hall fumbled through a big, brown envelope and replied: $1,069,500."

"I can understand now," declared Bates, "why the owner doesn't want it back."

Hall sai dthe garage has space for parking 819 cars, but is only accommodating 317 as part of the building is used for "dead storage" of Government records and discarded equipment.

"Then get the dead storage out," commanded Bates.

Irving C. Root, superintendent of National Capital Parks, and a member of the parking agency, said the Interior Department would be opposed to use of park lands for underground garages if the projects would destroy the trees and the beauty of the parks.

"We don't want to destroy the beauty of the parks, either," retorted Hebert. "If the projects are feasible without destroying the parks, what would be the department's attitude?"

Root said he did not have the answer.

"Well, find out and let us know," ordered Hebert.

Working For 18 Years

Maj. Gen. U. S. Grand 3d, chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, told the committee the commission had been working on the parking problem for 18 years.

"I wouldn't admit it then," declared Hebert.

Once upon a time General Grant said construction of a garage under the Ellipse was considered but when estimates were produced showing the project would cost 3 million dollars, Congress tossed it overboard.

The committee will hold another round table conference today at 10 a. m. The witnesses will include General Grant, Root, and House District Committee Chairman Jennings Randolph (D., W. Va.).

Uranium Land Grab Reports To Be Probed

By International News Service

Senator Kilgore (D., W. Va.) demanded yesterday a Senate investigation of reports received by him that there was a leak on the Government's atomic bomb research a year ago and that speculators had bought uranium-bearing lands.

Long before Congress and the country were told of the atomic bomb research, Kilgore said he was informed, enough facts on the Government's activity reached "certain companies" to cause them to acquire uranium deposits—a source of the wonder power.

Kilgore, chairman of the Senate War Mobilization Committee, turned the reports over to Chairman McMahon (D., Conn.) of the new Senate Atomic Energy Committee.

Source Not Disclosed

Kilgore declared that he had been trying to find time ever since the atomic bombing of Hiroshima to investigate the reports and that now he thought it was up to the Atomic Energy Committee to investigate them. He did not reveal the source of his information or the names of persons allegedly involved.

Kilgore's disclosure complicated the atomic drama on Capitol Hill, marked yesterday by the organization meeting of McMahon's special committee, consideration of a scientific adviser for the group, and other angles behind closed doors.

McMahon said that his committee will investigate the reports conveyed to him by Kilgore.

He said also that he conferred with President Truman yesterday at the White House on plans discussed by his committee, and that he told the President the committee "desires to cooperate with him in every way looking toward a logical solution" of atomic problems.

Would Revoke Claims

Foreknowledge of the atomic secret by the reported land-grabbers was plainly charged by Kilgore when he asserted that "certain companies started to buy up deposits and file mineral claims on Government lands a year ago, when none of us on Capitol Hill knew what was going on."

Kilgore declared that claims to such lands should be revoked, and that "one of the main jobs for the McMahon committee will be to see that no private concerns take advantage of holdings acquired as result of these leaks."

McMahon pointed out that the Government has the power of taking uranium lands by condemnation, and said he sees little danger in holding of uranium reserves by private interests, or little chance that any company would profit thereby.

President Truman has issued an executive order banning any new uranium mineral claims on the public domain. McMahon said he believes the courts would permit no great value on recently acquired uranium properties.

The Atomic Energy Committee chairman said, too, that no committee decision was reached on selection of a scientific adviser after he placed before the group 25 telegrams from scientists recommending others in their field for the important post.

Representative Neely later introduced a House resolution which would request President Truman to call a United Nations conference at Washington "to utilize atomic energy in the pursuits of peace and to outlaw it as an instrumentality of destruction in time of war."

The resolution would provide that all friendly countries be asked also to provide for drastic reduction in armaments, military and naval personnel.

Senate President McKellar (D., Tenn.) asserted in the Senate later that the United States should act to get an international agreement to outlaw the atomic bomb while hands.

"To my mind," he said, "it might be impossible ever to outlaw the atomic bomb if we first gave away our formula to other nations.

"We should lead the world in the humanitarian and civilized movements to outlaw this great weapon of destruction which unfortunately kills the just and the unjust, the weak and the strong, men women, children and babies alike."

Home Pricing Suits Snyder; Bowles Differs

Reconversion Director John W. Snyder yesterday assured the building industry that its present voluntary program of pricing new homes is satisfactory to the administration.

If the program should fail to head off a price boom, he said, "we will determine later on what further steps the Government should take."

"Considerable attention has been given to the advisability of price control on finished houses," he told the newly organized construction advisory council sponsored by the United States Chamber of Commerce. "It is not our present intention to ask Congress for such legislation."

Bowles to Press for Ceilings

Simultaneously, Price Administrator Chester Bowles assured a press conference that he will press for price ceilings on new homes. His position, he said, is unchanged from what it was a week ago when he told a Senate Subcommittee he urged "with all the force I have that Congress enact legislation to stop this onrushing inflation of home prices in its tracks at the earliest possible moment."

Bowles further declared yesterday that all new houses will have rental ceilings.

The construction advisory committee is meeting to plan revival of large-scale building activity throughout the country. Earl O. Shreve, vice president of General Electric Co., said in the keynote address that the conference would afford a chance to discuss common interests "in a construction market which rperesents from 10 to 15 per cent of the Nation's economy."

Patman Reports "Crisis"

Meantime Representative Wright Patman (D., Texas) declared the housing situation has reached a crisis in Dallas, where 2000 returned servicemen and their families are without adequate shelter.

He released a telegram from Mayor Woodall Rodgers urging the "desperate" situation be brought to the Government's attention and a plea made for an immediate temporary housing program in that city.

Patman said, "The housing situation is growing steadily worse, and immediate action is necessary if hundreds of thousands of returning servicemen are to be sheltered this winter."

Greeted With Applause

Snyder's reference to the recent lifting of restrictions on building materials, and to his opposition to OPA plans for ceilings on finished homes, met with applause from the audience. The meeting of the council during the morning session had been marked by attack after attack upon the OPA. Many of the speakers during the morning had held OPA responsible for delaying a revival of home construction since the war.

Eric Johnston, president of the Chamber, urged the council members to meet with labor and to "think out a settlement of their problems, rather than slugging it out."

"If we sit down and think it out," he said "we are on the eve of unparalleled prosperity."

Cooperative Efforts Urged

Cooperative efforts to reduce building costs, not only of single homes and apartments, but of business and industrial structures were urged by nearly all speakers at the day-long forum.

"Once prices get out of line," declared Douglas Whitlock, chairman of the Producers Council, representing manufactures of materials, "the Government will impose new restrictions so severe that private building will shrink almost to wartime levels.

"If the Government takes no action, then the public will refuse to pay prevailing prices and building will come to a dead stop."

4. "Recommend additional legislation terminating all remaining unnecessary activities."

Meanwhile, a sharp Senate battle developed over a proposed grant of authority for President Truman to reorganize the Federal Government.

No one, apparently, was completely satisfied with the measure brought to the floor by the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Administration friends were out to kill a provision which would let either House or Senate nullify any reorganization plan submitted to Congress by the President.

Senator Hatch (D., N. Mex.), who hopes to tailor the measure nearer to the President's wishes, told reporters he thought there were "too many exemptions."

The bill prohibits any change in the status of 13 agencies.

Other Senators contended the measure gave too broad a grant of power to the President.

Higgins Closes Plants to End Labor Trouble

New Orleans, Nov. 1 (AP).—Beset by labor trouble, Andrew J. Higgins, sr., told workers today that he was closing his three boat-building plants here. The workers, he said, would get 30 days' pay and assistance in finding other jobs.

The three plants, employing more than 2000 workers, had been closed four days by a work stoppage, ordered by AFL unions after Higgins broke off contract negotiations. The plant owner charged a CIO union claimed to represent a majority of employes, and he declined to negotiate until an election could determine the bargaining agent.

Higgins told workers in a speech that he was closing because "interpretations o fthe Wagner Act make competition prohibitive" and that he was being forced to carry on his payrolls nonproductive employes.

The plants during the war years employed approximately 12,000 persons in the production of landing craft, torpedo boats and aircraft rescue equipment. Lately they have been producing pleasure boats, camp trailer outfits and building materials.

What AMINOS in hospitals teach us about MEAT at home

Corporal Charles W. Allman of the Fifth Marines, from Colby, Wisconsin, wounded at Okinawa and now at Great Lakes Naval Hospital, gets his noontime meal with plenty of good juicy meat in it. Like all convalescent fighters in our service hospitals, he eats generous amounts of meat to provide the proteins for rebuilding his body more speedily.

Knowledge gained through wartime medical advancements is guiding women in the feeding of their families. Now we know that the amino acids in meat are as essential to maintaining healthy adult bodies and to growth in children as they are to repairing the bodies and rebuilding the health of convalescent fighters.

READ THE MENUS for any of the service convalescent hospitals, and you'll find the word "MEAT" running through them, day in and day out—for breakfast, for dinner, for supper.

Take a look at the trays at Great Lakes, for example, and you'll see that the amounts of meat served are generous.

All this is because wartime medical science has demonstrated that, given plenty of meat, men suffering from wounds, burns, starvation or infections, recover faster.

The secret of meat's restorative power lies in "the amazing aminos" (a-mee-nos)—those mysterious substances in the proteins we eat which our bodies use to build and rebuild our tissues, organs, blood and infection-fighting antibodies.

What do these aminos in hospitals teach us about meat at home? Just this:

Children cannot grow and adults cannot rebuild tissues (which wear out constantly in the process of living) without the amino acids of protein foods. Our blood cannot be regenerated—our resistance to many infections cannot be maintained unless we obtain them.

Twenty-two amino acids have been isolated. Ten of them are known to be essential. Without them, life is not possible.

The protein of meat has all ten of the essential aminos; is rich in them. If we have a generous amount of meat in our diets, we can be assured of getting the aminos we need.

You may have thought it was hunger for the good flavor of meat that prompted your desire for it. But isn't it more likely that it was the hunger of your body for those essential aminos that instinctively guided you?

O. D. Meredith, from Highland Park, Illinois, Chief Meat Cutter of the Commissary Staff, slicing off steaks for convalescents and other patients at Great Lakes Naval Hospital. It takes 80,000 pounds of dressed beef, 40,000 pounds of pork loins, 17,000 pounds of ham and other meats in proportion, to provide a month's meat menus for the men at this hospital.

'The Dolly Sisters' Makes an Old Formula Seem New at Palace

FIRST EMPHASIS deserves to be given the fact that "The Dolly Sisters," which yesterday opened its first Washington engagement on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater, belongs in the top flight of Technicolor musicals.

John Payne

Its music is catchy and nostalgic, embracing, as it does, a considerable number of old-time hit songs and two new ones by James Mor—o and Mack Gordon. It is well cast, directed w.t an eye single to entertainment and dressed up with a succession of stunning costumes, opulent settings and Technicolor's most spectacular spectrum. Comedy there is, too, in reasonable abundance and two persistent love stories thread the narrative of two fabulous careers in the American theater.

Those, it seems to me, are the prime requisites of a successful musical, on or off the stage, and "The Dolly Sisters" has them all.

The one thing it cannot boast is novelty and freshness of form. It travels a familiar groove, but a little more engagingly than most of its predecessors in the same category.

George Jessel recently confided to this column that in his first essay as a producer for Twentieth Century-Fox less effort was made to preserve historical accuracy than to put on a show the customers would enjoy.

In at least one view, his lifetime in the theater has guided him to a substantial fulfillment of his intention.

It is as plain as the back of your hand, however, that in scripting the lives of Jennie and Rosie Dolly—Jancsi and Roszicka Duetsch, if you prefer their real names—Scenarists John Larkin and Marian Spitzer have taken enough dramatic licenses with fact to make them millionaires if they were to sell them for $2 apiece.

How It Started

The story opens with the arrival of the twins in New York from Hungary under the guardianship of Uncle Latsie, who nervously seeks out his old friend, Tsimmis, a theatrical booking agent, whom he engages in a game of cards, for strictly economic reasons, while the youngsters in their peasant garb find their way to the orchestra stand and begin to sing and dance for the free edification of the diners in a "Little Hungary" restaurant.

Their careers start that instant and, after a passage of years, progress to a vaudeville booking in Elmira as a stepping-stone to Broadway. En route to this big upstate engagement, they encounter a likely young fellow on the train who introduces himself as Harry Fox, the big shot heard around Broadway and the amusement world. The picture's dominant romance in Jennie's life begins when the prodigious Mr. Fox whips up a mild tornado upon discovering the unknown Dolly Sisters billed above him on the program and the three-sheets.

This is maneuvered by conveniently telescoping Jennie's love affairs and combining two husbands in the character of Harry Fox, who thus is made to take on most of the attributes of Song Writer Jean Schwartz in addition to his own.

The same procedure is followed in the case of Rosie, which would be of no matter except that it forces the film to depart widely from biography and assume more the delusive quality of fanciful fiction.

This doesn't matter a great deal, either, because probably not one out of a hundred of the present crop of picturegoers knows the Dolly Sisters as anything more than a nebulous sort of theatrical legend, and those who do, won't care, in view of the high voltage of the screen's eye-blinking spectacle.

A Torturous Trail

From Elmira on, the action concerns itself with the sisters' loyalty to each other, the trickery by which they enlisted the interest of the fabulous Oscar Hammerstein, pere; the break between Jennie and Harry, when he staggered along the path to stardom which she covered so speedily, and the subsequent European triumphs, when the Dollys appeared before kings and Jennie captivated the Duke of Breck and divers and sundry others of the nobility.

Harry's service in the First World War, a savage automobile accident along the Riviera, separations, reunions, the constant tilt between love and a career, and the other concomitants of a familiar formula make up the remainder of the "love interest," suspense and whatnot, only occasionally lending a somber note to a preponderantly gay and enlivening footage of melody and magnificence.

In the title roles, Betty Grable and June Haver may not be the Dolly Sisters, but they are a sufficiently fancy and fascinating facsimile thereof. Miss Grable, whether she galvanizes you or not, is exceedingly adept at this sort of thing, and the thoroughly efficient but less experienced Miss Haver teams nicely with her and equally sets off—or is set off by—the bizarre trappings in which the duo have been costumed for this burst of cinematic splendor.

John Payne is no whit like the Harry Fox I knew, but without any attempt at impersonation acquits himself handsomely as both singing actor and romanticist. No happier selection for the role of Uncle Latsie could have been made than S. Z. Sakall, who fits into this business like a nickel in a slot.

Has Master's Touch

As a composite Irving Netcher is Rosie's romantic interludes, Frank Latimore turns in a crisp and believable performance, and Reginald Gardiner is a sauve, polished and ardent Duke of Breck to the life—if such a gentleman ever lived. Sig Ruman, the Tsimmis; Robert Middlemass, as Hammerstein; Trudy Marshall, Gene Sheldon, one of the mainsprings of "Where Do We Go From Here?" and numerous others—not forgetting a dazzling assemblage of showgirls—help add the whole thing up on the credit side.

It was suggested here not so long ago that Jessel has come nearer achieving the "Ziegfeld touch" in his first extravaganza than any of his fellow-craftsmen in the same field, and we still abide by that opinion.

We are encouraged in our tenacity by yesterday's announcement that "The Dolly Sisters" was running ahead of all its precursors among the Technicolor musicals at the Palace box iffice, just as it did out in Chicago, where it broke all records.

The length of the picture—it consumes all but a sliver of two hours—has whittled the supplementary screen attractions down to a minimum on the new bill.

"Strange Destiny," an MGM miniature, and the picturized "News of the Day," are the only auxiliaries of a feature that could do nicely without any.

Homesick Yanks In Italy Still Kid About Plight

Rome, Nov. 1 (AP).—Homesick American troops in Italy, critical of the redeployment program, are still able to kid about their plight.

A roundup in the Army newspaper Stars and Stripes today carried these suggestions by soldiers on how to get home quick:

T/4 Russell R. Rouse suggested that Italy be made the forty-ninth State of the Union: "Then the boys would already be back."

Pvt. J. K. Kearne: "I think I will go back on the Italian immigration quota."

T/4 Tom Brown and three others proposed that the Army and Navy pool all pontoon bridges and life rafts so all could walk back on a bridge.

Nicholas McGillicutty suggested chartering a fishing boat from an Italian who is ready to carry 12 soldiers across the Atlantic for 20 cartons of cigarettes, a suit of clothes, a pair of shoes, 10 pounds of sugar, 10 pounds of coffee and two boxes of chocolate.

Quantico to Honor Marine Officer on Taxi Honeymoon

Quantico, Va., Nov. 1 (AP).—When Marine Capt. H. L. Kipp—seeing America in a taxicab on his honeymoon—reaches the Quantico Marine Base here, he has news of a decoration awaiting him.

Captain Kipp's orders, issued September 29, called for his arrival here yesterday, but the bridegroom, who took a taxicab for his cross-country wedding trip when he failed to get train reservations, so far has not arrived.

The public relations office said today that recommendations for a bronze star for Captain Kipp are awaiting him at the Marine Corps school, where Kipp is to report for duty with the field artillery training battalion.

22,000 Md. Farmers In AAA Program

College Park, Md., Nov. 1 (AP).—There were approximately 22,000 Maryland participants in the 1945 agricultural conservation program, State Chairman Joseph H. Blandford reported today.

Of that number, about 5000 received lime and fertilizer in lieu direct financial aid, while about 17,000 other farmers will share partial reimbursement on the purchase price of materials to carry on improvement programs.

Blandford said farmers in 11 counties already have furnished reports on the use of materials. He urged the remainder to send in their statements promptly to county AAA offices so that checks may be mailed to those qualified.

Loose-Leaf Notebook

New York, Nov. 1.—A. Strok is the Far East booking agent who arranged for Ellman, Zimbalist, Grace Moore and other artists to tour the Orient.

Grace Moore

In 1937 Strok received a contract from Miss Moore to do a series of concerts in China and Japan. But the war intervened and Miss Moore postponed the trip. On December 8, 1941, Strok was interned by the Japs. . . . Last week strok sent a cable to Miss Moore, notifying her that he had been liberated, that he was regaining his health and that he was grateful for the fate which kept him alive. There was a P. S.: How soon would Miss Moore come to the Orient, pursuant to contract?

Ed Flynn, former chairman of the National Democratic Committee, will leave for Europe again shortly after the election to resume his trips between Moscow and the Vatican . . . The Army men who have been examing the Nazi defendants in the Nuremberg trials report that never in the history of criminal law will there ever have been such a mass of singing—confession and cross-accusation . . . Jackie Conn, the fighter and brother of Billy Conn, has returned from Europe. He will open a restaurant in Pittsburgh . . . Dorothy Gish will play the role of Mrs. Oliver Wendell Holmes, opposite Lou Calhern in "Magnificent Yankee."

When Lloyd Gough opened in "Deep Are the Roots," the new hit play in which he has one of the leading roles, he found an envelope in his dressing room on opening night. As he expected, it contained 25 cents . . . It was left for him, as it always has been on his opening nights, by Betsy Blair. Miss Blair, the young actress-wife of Gene Kelly, sends him the 25 cents in lieu of an opening-night wire of congratulations because Lloyd Gough for years has been denouncing Western Union and he doesn't approve of giving money to a monopoly.

During the atomic bomb experiments, when the British scientists came here, the wives of the American scientists invited them to dinner. But when the guests left none of the wives could engage their husbands in any conversation about the visitors—because the husbands were under oath not to mention or discuss scientists engaged in the project . . . The scientists who went to the West Coast plant at Las Alamos would ask indirect questions about directions to the place. So many of them stopped at one gas station, that whenever the proprietor heard a man vaguely ask: "Suppose I wanted to go to Santa Fe?" he'd shrug: "Three miles down the road you'll find the short-cut to Las Alamos." . . . The scientists all had their shoes soiled by chemicals at the plant. Whenever they'd have their shoes shined, the bootblack would recognize the chemicals and say: "I see you've been working on the Las Alamos project. How's it going?"

June Havoc was visited by Donald Gibbs, her former husband, concerning the disposition of some joint property. "Look at your plucked eyebrows. Typical Hollywood," he criticized. When Miss Havoc walked around the room, Gibbs noticed her black nylons and continued: "Awful, awful. Black nylons. Typical Hollywood." . . . Miss Havoc then drew an overlarge compact from her bag and started to powder her nose. "Look at that compact. Just look at it," Briggs groaned. "Typical Hollywood." . . . "Darling," Miss Havoc reminded him, "YOU gave this to me, five years ago."

Bill Hardy took his Gay Nineties Quartet and revue to Mason General Hospital at Brentwood, Long Island, for Army experiments in amnesia and psychoneurotic cases. The doctors hope that the old songs they brought, songs about "Sally," "Mary," "Mary Lou," etc., songs about different places — "Tennessee," "Wabash Blues," "Blue Ridge Mountains," etc., would stir the memories of some of the patients . . . George Trommer is making the reconversion to playboy—he's bought a yacht again . . . Lieut. Col. Howard Corcoran, former Assistant United States Attorney here and brother of Tommy Corcoran, may work with the Council of Foreign Ministers.

Swifty Morgan, the sportsman, world traveler and currently a tie and jewelry salesman, was at the Copacabana. He began his spiel by singing the praises of Mayor manager. "Fiorella made a real LaGuardia to Jack Entratter, the friendly gesture," Swifty insisted. "He just gave me the morgue concession—for the cuff-links worn by all the stiffs. I happen to have some with me" . . . Swifty then produced a dozen pair of cuff links. Entratter admired one and suggested that Swifty give it to him as a present. "I'll give you a present," Morgan replied, "of some of your old Copacabana silverware."

Horace Stoneham, owner of the Giants and of the Polo Grounds, said in Toots Shor's that the Conn-Louis fight will be held in Philadelphia . . . One of cafe society's wealthiest and most prominent women is trying to get permission to visit her brother. He's a Nazi prisoner of war, held in a PW camp in the West . . . Fannie Hurst met Dr. Albert Einstein and proudly showed the scientist her well-publicized Yorkshirt terrier. "How do you like my dog?" Miss Hurst asked. Dr. Einstein studied the pet and shrugged: "I would use it for a long mop."

Now She Can Tell More People About It

Constant blending some 28 years ago perfected the Margarine that Mrs. Filbert first sold in her own neighborhood. Because it was so good the news spread from door to door—town to town from Maine to Georgia.

Because of it's increasing popularity daily, Mrs. Filbert can now tell more people about her margarine. And Mrs. Filbert believes if you will try her margarine you will find, too, there is nothing quite so good as a spread for bread—as a shortening with richer flavor—for cooking vegetables and for pan-frying. No wonder millions of women say there is nothing like it.

They coax flavor! Mrs. Filbert's Salad Dressing and Mayonnaise are so delicate—so smooth they actually coax and never smother . . . even the hidden flavor of fruits and vegetables.

Year-Old Quadruplets Kiss Differently, but Can't Fool Dad

Philadelphia, Nov. 1 (AP).—Papa Joseph Cirminello, father of quadruplets and a bear for figures, came up with some amazing totals today as his offspring observed their first birthday anniversary.

Cirminello, a Securities and Exchange Commission analyst, totaled up his accounts and found that the quads consumed each month: 120 cans of milk, 240 cans of vegetables, soup and fruit, 15 dozen oranges, 10 dozen eggs, five bottles of vitamins, eight large boxes of cereal, two boxes of toasted bread, plus desserts, beef liver, chicken and lamb.

By actual count, he added, the monthly diaper quota is about 1000.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Cirminello, who formerly lived in Washington, D. C., before the SEC moved here, agree that it has been a hectic year, but a happy one. The children—Eileen, Maureen, Kathleen and Michael—are thriving and Eileen and Kathleen can stand alone. After wrestling awhile with the housing problem, the family is comfortably situated in suburban Broomal. And a $600 raise for Papa helps make ends meet.

The quads are hard to tell apart, but their father says he has a foolproof way:

"They all kiss differently. Kathleen puts her tongue against your cheek, then she coos—and then she bites you. Eileen rubs her nose on your cheek and then goes b-l-r-r-b with her lips. Michael rubs cheeks. Maureen takes things easy and has to be coaxed, but once she gets interested she's a real clinger."

First Local Delivery of 1946 Ford

ORDERED IN 1942—Maj. Gen. Albert W. Waldron of the Army Ground Forces receives the keys to a 1946 model Ford from Cherner Motor Co. officers, Joe Cherner (left), president, and Samuel A. Mensh, vice president. The delivery, the first in Washington, was made yesterday at the Army War College. General Waldron ordered the car more than three years ago and in the interim saw duty in the Pacific and was wounded while serving in New Guinea. Pending OPA decision on ceiling prices for new cars, the super de luxe tudor model sold provisionally at the 1942 ceiling

Soviets Reject Pleas to End Censorship

Moscow, Oct. 31 (Delayed) (U.P.)—Foreign Commissar Viacheslav Molotov today rejected the recommendations of a letter from the Anglo-American Press Association in Moscow protesting Soviet censorship in peacetime and suggesting its abandonment.

Molotov's reply was given orally through Acting Chief Lomakin of the press department. He said the letter was "not solid, therefore it was found not necessary to consider it."

The correspondents' letter was dated October 20. Its text:

"The Anglo-American Press Association wishes to put on record its attitude toward the censorship of press dispatches from Great Britain and the United States.

Soviet Keeps Censors

"Now that the war is over, the Soviet Union is the only one of the great Allied powers that retains a strict wartime censorship of news written by foreign correspondents. Throughout the war, foreign correspondents never objected to censorship for purposes of military security.

"But censorship in peacetime of all dispatches relating not only to military affairs, but to politics, economics, cultural affairs and to every aspect of life in the Soviet Union, destroys the value of foreign correspondents in a free world and has created a general distrust abroad of all news emanating from the Soviet Union.

"We wish to go on record against censorship in principle. We wish also to protest against the operation of Soviet censorship. It is dictatorial and arbitrary. Censors frequently tamper with the wording and distort the meaning of messages. The censorship is vacillating and capricious; it varies from day to day and from censor to censor. Some censors are insufficiently acquainted with the English language to understand the material submitted to them.

Messages Delayed

"Censors are often uninformed regarding current events. Frequently messages are delayed so long that they lost their value; sometimes they are actually lost in the process of censorship.

"Hesitating to make decisions, censors delay messages sometimes for days and this destroys the tempo of news reporting. Censors extend their authority to topics that do not come within the province of Soviet censorship; they arbitrarily censor information that comes from non-Soviet sources and deals with non-Soviet affairs.

"Apart from its effects upon modern journalism, Soviet censorship prevents the development of understanding and the promotion of good relations between the Soviet Union and the rest of the world.

"Now that the war is over, we respectfully request that you establish the same conditions for free reporting that Soviet journalists have in Great Britain and the United States.

"Yours very truly, the Anglo-American Correspondents' Association in Moscow."

High Command Ordered Orgy, Yamashita Hears Woman Insist

Manila, Nov. 1 (AP).—A women spared from a saturnalia of rape by a Japanese officer friend testified today that orders for one last blood orgy in Manila were issued by the imperial high command itself.

The story of her own escape from the mass rape of 25 beautiful Manila girls by Japanese troops during the Battle of Manila was told behind closed doors at the war crimes trial of Lieut. Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita.

Identified only as "Mrs. N," the witness told the military commission that with her infant son in her arms she was forced to go to the swank Bayview Hotel, scene of night-long orgies during which the victims screamed for mercy.

She said that by chance she met a Captain Akashi, a Japanese officer she knew, and he hid her in a room.

Later, she continued, she was taken to the hotel dining room, swarming with Japanese marines, where she faced an unnamed officer and protested the violation of the Filipino girls.

The officer told her that his troops were under an "order from the high command to kill all civilians in Manila, and that the Japanese hated all white women."

A Japanese lieutenant by the name of Kito then told "Mrs. N." that he was powerless to stop the raping because the soldiers and marines were fresh from the front lines and could do as they wished.

Seven women victims previously had testified as to how the 25 were chosen for their beauty last February 9 from among 400 women rounded up in aManila's exclusive Ermita district.

They were taken to Bayview, where they were passed from room to room with an accompaniment of slaps and kicks and forced to sumit to the Japanese officers and men. Some victims were only 12 years old.

City News in Brief

Eight members of a Roosevelt High School fraternity rolled up their pants, took off their shoes and waded into Rock Creek last night to return to the roadway an automobile reported to have been forced into the stream by a drunken driver.

Reds to Begin Manchurian Withdrawal

Chungking, Nov. 1 (AP).—Russians will begin their large-scale withdrawal from Manchuria tomorrow and will be out by December 1, a semiofficial dispatch from Tientsin said today. Across the path Chinese government troops would take to relieve them, however, are massed forces of Chinese Communists.

Nevertheless, government soldiers will move north this month in strength, and will take over from the Russians by December 3, a Chinese dispatch from Changchun insisted.

Scattered fighting continued today through 11 northern provinces.

Government sources here acknowledged that:

1. Communists now control most of Shantung Province, virtually isolating the United States Marine-held port of Tsingtao from which central China hoped to get coal.

2. Both central government and Shansi provincial forces which encountered Chinese Communist troops in the north have "taken a beating."

A government source also confirmed withdrawal of the Communists' new Fourth Army from points south of the Yangtze River, but said it is being moved north to attack and dislocate the Peiping-Hankow and Tientsin-Pukow (Tientsin-Nanking) railroads, thus blocking movement of government forces in strength into North China and Manchuria. The Communists want to control Manchuria themselves, he said.

The comparatively few government troops which thus far have been in action in the north were lightly equipped and in consequence suffered considerable casualties in clashes with Communists, this source declared.

Communist spokesmen in Chungking reiterated their official attitude: That they seek only a peaceful settlement of their differences with Generalissimo Chiang's government. Several added today a sharp note of rebuke to America for transporting Chiang's troops into strategic areas.

Report Reveals Hitler Aged Rapidly Toward Close of War

Berlin, Nov. 1 (AP).—Allied investigators today pictured Adolf Hitler as a trembling fuehrer who aged rapidly in the war's last months and then shot himself while his mistress, Eva Braun, was taking poison.

British intelligence officers said it has been proced "as conclusively as possible without bodies" that Hitler and Miss Braun—declared by the Russian to have been Hitler's last-minute bride—committed suicide.

The British report said evidence should Hitler shot himself in the mouth, and that Miss Braun took poison at 2:30 a. m. April 30, in a bunker of the Reichschancellory.

Bodies Burned in Garden

"After the suicide," it added, "the bodies were taken into a garden just outside the bunker by Goebbels, Bormann and others, drenched with gasoline and burned."

American interrogators released the first reports on questioning of three physicions who attended Hitler from 1934 to 1944. The doctors told Army authorities that Hitler looked his age until 1943, but after that "he gave the appearance of having grown old."

The three doctors questioned were Erwin Geising, an eye, ear, nose and throat specialist; Hans Karl von Hasselbach, who was with Hitler through most of the ten years, and Karl Brandt, Reich's commissioner for health and on Hitlers' personal medical staff until October, 1944.

From Constant Medication

Contrary to reports in some Allied countries, Hitler apparently had no venereal disease and was normal sexually.

Brandt reported Hitler suffered both cramps and vomiting during 1944 and 1945, and said "these probably were the result of constant strychnine and atropin medication, and were not of hysteric origin."

"No disintegration of personality occurred up to October, 1944," Brandt added. "However, Hitler's actions did become less intelligible after August 20, 1944. It is assumed that a slight commotion of the cerebri occurred after the (bomb) attack, but no signs, such as coma, vomiting or pulse disturbance, were evident.

Trade Jobs Show Increase

From Yesterday's Late Editions

A sharp increase in job openings in the wholesale and retail trade in the metropolitan area was reported yesterday by Area USES Director Ernest V. Connolly.

Simultaneously, he revealed that positions listed at the two District USES offices at the end of last week totaled 11,610, compared with 11,229 unfilled job openings registered in the week ending October 20.

On the supply side, Connolly reported that routings of job hunters have reached an average of 1000 daily. The figure, he said, is the highest for any period since the end of the war.

Increased by 700

While positions in mercantile establishments increased by 700 last week, the rise was offset by a substantial decline in demand for construction and service workers. The boost in wholesale and retail job openings was attributed to the imminent opening of the Christmas shopping season.

Government positions listed at the USES increased to 913 at the end of last week from 674 openings in the week ending October 20.

Connolly said local employers have shown a tendency to return to prewar age limits for personnal.

"This is particularly true regarding women seeking employment as sales persons in retail shops," he said.

"Many job orders today specify only women between 18 and 35 years years of age, which is a radical change from the policies made necessary under wartime controls when the age limits for nonessential establishments ran from 16 to 70 years.

The Shoe Pinches

There was no occasion at all for the anguished and angry outcry that came from some members of Congress over President Truman's Tuesday night address. The President gave the people of the United States, all of whom are his constituents, a reminder that Congress has failed not only to pass but even to vote upon legislation which he considers essential to the reestablishment of a sound peacetime economy. The bills to which he referred—expanded unemployment compensation and full employment—are integral parts of his reconversion program. They have been bottled up in committees which have denied the House of Representatives any opportunity to express its will upon them. This is, of course, a form of filibustering. And if those whom the President held responsible for it feel injured by the accusation, it is undoubtedly because the shoe pinches them. The President did not excoriate Congress; he criticized the responsible committees.

Mr. Truman expressed his reminder with temperance and dignity. And it seems to us that the reminder was very much in order. Indeed, it was unfortunately belated; in a period of economic crisis, the responsible House committees have doodled and boondoggled over these important measures for an unconscionable period. Mr. Truman, out of a desire to preserve harmony between the executive and legislative branches of the Government, has been more than patient. But he cannot rest content with a mere initial request for legislative action. He cannot be indifferent to the fate of bills which are vital to the execution of his policies. It is a part of his obligation to strive for the enactment of laws he deems necessary for the public welfare. If he has now resorted, as some Congressmen complained with what must have been highly synthetic indignation, to putting pressure on the Legislature, it is pressure from the American people. He has not only a right but, indeed, a duty to do this.

Up The Wrong Tree

With labor disputes slowing down reconversion and clouding the postwar economic outlook for the United States, means of coping with those disputes ought to be engaging the most thoughtful attention in both executive and legislative circles. Few problems are more important. Yet there is a disposition to trifle with the issue or to treat it as if it were merely a petty annoyance to be disposed of casually. The House Military Affairs Committee, for example, has taken a crack at the strike situation through a "rider" to the bill for amendment of the War Labor Disputes Act.

To our way of thinking improved machinery for the adjustment of labor disputes ought to be the subject of a major hearing before a Senate or House committee. Every aspect of the problem should be explored and comprehensrve legislation patterned after the Railway Labor Act should be drawn. But there is no strong official leadership in that direction. President Truman made a major address on labor without going into the basic problem of how disputes are to be settled short of prolonged idleness and violence. More discouraging is the squeak on a minor note coming from Capitol Hill while comprehensive labor legislation lies dormant.

The Military Affairs Committee's proposal to suspend a union from collective bargaining privileges for a year for violation of a no-strike agreement in its contract would mean only the elimination of no-strike agreements from contracts. We cannot see that this has any vital relationship to the problem at hand. It merely rubs salt into labor's wounds and thus probably makes more difficult the enactment of a constructive measure to facilitate the settlement of disputes.

Donald Richberg told an audience in Chicago on Wednesday that the first step toward effective solution of this problem is the enactment of a law that will impose on all parties the duty "to refrain from waging war at least until peaceful methods have been given a fair trial. We think he is right. If such a law were on the books, there would be hope for amicable adjustment of numerous disputes without interruption of the reconversion process. At present the Government is in the anomalous position of guaranteeing to labor the powerful weapon of collective action without requiring that it be appropriately used. The situation cries out for leadership from both Congress and the White House, and not much leadership is forthcoming from either quarter.

Good Neighborliness

It is a gross distortion of Secretary Byrnes' excellent address before the New York Herald-Tribune Forum to stress the passage in which the Secretary of State declared that he recognized Russia's "special security interests" in eastern and central Europe. Mr. Byrnes certainly recognized those interests. But, as the Soviet chairmanships of the Balkan councils testify, this was no new policy. What is of most importance to note in the Byrnes speech is that there is no indication in it that the United States is prepared to give a green light to Russia to do anything she wants to in eastern and central Europe. On the contrary, the signal was cautionary. "We live in one world," he said, "and in this atomic age regional isolationism is even more dangerous than is national isolationism."

It happens that the only functioning regional arrangement in the best sense of that term is in this hemisphere. As Mr. Byrnes pointed out, in the inter-American system the members do not interfere in the internal affairs of their neighbors. "Freedom means more than freedom to act as we would like them to act." Furthermore, cooperation among the American republics does not justify discrimination against non-American states. "The American republics have practiced the policy of equal treatment for all states which respect the sovereignty and integrity of their fellow states." And he added significantly: "International cooperation must . . . depend upon intelligent compromise. It does not require us or any other nation to neglect its special relations with its nearer neighbors. But it does require that all neighborly relations be fitted into an organized system of international relations world-wide in scope."

In thus emphasizing the true meaning of neighborliness in a shrunken world Mr. Byrnes was pointing a finger of criticism directly at Russia. For the kind of regionalism which Russia has practiced in central and eastern Europe runs directly contrary to the kind of regionalism represented by the inter-American system. Yet our own case, good as it is, would be better had we adopted with relation to the Pacific the same world-mindedness we preach to others. Certainly the policy of security imperialism some of our leaders have been clamoring for, in some instances involving territory belonging to our allies, cannot be reconciled with that true good neighbor policy so eloquently expounded by Secretary Byrnes. Security cannot be an individual matter, even for a Nation as powerful as our own. As he so well said: "Today the world must take its choice. There must be one world for all of us or there will be no world for any of us."

Brazilian Change

It looks to us as if the coup d'etat at Rio de Janeiro has all the earmarks of a healthy manifestation on the part of the Brazilians. Getiulo Vargas, who has had a 15-year run as dictator of Brazil, had agreed to the holding of a presidential election on December 2. All of a sudden he seemed to change his mind. Putting in his brother as police chief at Rio, he decided that, instead of a presidential election, there should be an election for a constitutional assembly. The object was to be the drawing up of a new constitution. However, the army ultimatum which caused Vargas to quit resulted in putting into the presidential office a man who is constitutionally there, the Brazilian chief justice, Jose Linhares. The organic authority is the 1934 constitution. According to this constitution, a vacancy in the Presidency caused by death or otherwise is to be filled by the chief justice. That is the constitution that appears to be favored by Brazilians anxious to throw off the dictatorship of Vargas.

It was under this constitution that Vargas, with three years of unconstitutional rule back of him, got himself elected President. Three years later elections were due, but Vargas imposed a constitution of his own, and this was made to entrench his own authority. Since 1937 he has given Brazil a one-man rule, tinctured with, but by no means dominated by, "New Order" ideas imported from Nazi Germany. It was a dictatorship which was sometimes harsh, but which most of the time was tempered by the easy going habits and sunny temperament of the Brazilian people. Vargas was no megalolomaniac. He also had more than his share of shrewdness. When war came, he was at one with the Brazilian people in seeing that Brazil's interests lay with the United States. The partnership did a service for victory that cannot be underestimated. It has left its mark on Brazil in the speeding up of improvements which otherwise would have taken half a century to achieve. Vargas cannot be disassociated from the Brazilian-American war effort. Yet, while testifying to it, we are bound to recognize that the time had come for a change. Vargas, after 15 years of untrammeled rule, hated to resign the sweets of office, and there was every reason to suspect that he might be up to his 1937 shenanigans in connection with the appeal to the people on December 2.

For appetite feeds on itself in any dictatorship. The proof that Vargas had not had enough of his august office lay in the suspicious nature of the events immediately preceding the overturn. His federal police chief and brother had long been the leader of the Queremista movement, which was antielection and pro-Vargas. In other words, there was enough of a fishlike smell to warrant the countermove that succeeded in forcing Vargas' resignation. None can prophesy, of course, what the outcome will be. But the man who is now in the presidential office seems to enjoy the respect of the Brazilians not only because of the high office he has held but also because of his personal qualities. Brazil is at a turning point. The people of the United States, whose sons in Italy found the Brazilian soldiers made of the best tempered steel, who remember the valiant service of the Brazilian navy, will hope that they will round it with their representative institutions functioning again.

Yamashita

When Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita, conqueror of Malaya, was asked to give terms for the surrender of the British forces defending Singapore, he replied haughtily that they must trust to Bushido, or the ancient chivalric code of the Japanese warrior. Now Yamashita is on trial for his life before a military court at Manila. The charges against him are based mainly on barbarities and atrocities inflicted by his soldiers on the Filipinos in the closing stages of the Luzon campaign. If he is convicted, the principle will have been established that military commanders are in all circumstances personally responsible for the behavior of their troops. This will have an important bearing on the cases of other Japanese generals and admirals who are under similar accusation as war criminals.

Yamashita has stated that he knew nothing of the atrocities to which various Filipino witnesses have testified, such as the senseless slaughter of the women and children who had sought refuge in the Red Cross building at Manila last February, before the city fell to General MacArthur's forces. This statement is not on its face implausible, since General Yamashita must have had plenty of other matters to worry him at that particular time. In any case, Yamashita's army is not the only one in history which, during a retreat through unfriendly country, has engaged in wanton killing, wholesale rape and pillage. It has never been considered, however, that the failure of high military commanders to suppress such crimes, was tantamount to an authorization of them. Thus the accusation that General Yamashita, by his failure to prevent murder and rape, violated the "laws of war" would seem to rest on a principle of law improvised after the fact.

Yamashita's personal fate is perhaps of no great importance. The important thing is that this trial will set the pattern of the trials of other enemy commanders not only in the Far East but also in Germany. And, if he is convicted and executed, it will profoundly modify the future usages of war.

Chinese Kaleidoscope

The promise on the part of Russia to allow into Manchuria the government troops of Chiang Kai-shek seems to relieve the new situation of some of its latter-day tension. But it still leaves a number of questions unanswered. Chinese Communist troops had already taken positions in Manchuria. How did the forces get into Manchuria without Russian acquiescence? Why did they show fight at the sight of Kuomintang forces under Chiang Kai-shek's command? Was this Russian man-on-the-spot policy, or was it sanctioned from Moscow? Are we going to have the powers using China as a pawn in pressuring action on non-China matters? The fact that these questions have arisen at all makes the immediate future of the Far East again uncertain. It casts a shadow on recent engagements which seemed to remove China as a trouble spot for other powers: the instrument of surrender of the Japanese in China agreed to by all the powers whereby the Chungking government, aided by the United States, was authorized to take the surrender, and the Russo-Chinese accord whereby Moscow, in specific terms, acknowledged the sovereign status of the Chungking government.

Civil war has been endemic in China since the establishment of the republic in 1911. While we deplore it, while we hope that all the powers will encourage the healing talks in Chungking, intervention must be limited to the purposes agreed to by the powers. In the circumstances the prospective entry of Russia into the Far East Advisory Commission is welcome news, for close and continuous consultation on China is urgent. Our obligation and Russia's remains to sustain Chiang's government in Chungking during the changeover period in China. However, our commitment should be predicated, first, on Chiang's doing his part in keeping his repeated promises to dethrone the Kuomintang in the government, and, secondly, on the absence of change in the relative positions of the civil combatants. With neither stubbornness at Chungking nor a dead carcass as our China policy can we have any truck. This imposes a premium on watchfulness and resilience of the situation in China pursued in common by America and Russia. Both countries have reason in history to beware either of being played off against each other in a Chinese struggle for power or of playing off China in a world tussle.

SYCAMORE

The sycamore is my envy,
that anchored like any tree by its feeding feet, poised antlered and stately, it can deny and deny its immobility;
can strike the sight with movement restless as birds going up to long travel;
by its peeling bark, by mottle gray-brown, yellow and white and olive-green, can take tricks of sun and flight.

The sycamore is my envy,
that by illusion of light always shifting, dappled so summer or winter,
it never broods without laughter,
nor sleeps without motion.

Empire Preference

By Janet R. Keith

Canada's Attitude

DRASTIC REVISION of empire preference will undoubtedly be a condition attached to any large United States loan made to Britain. A point which has not been given much publicity during the Anglo-American economic talks in Washington is that Britain is powerless to revise the empire preference system by herself. She would be obliged to call a full-dress parley of all the commonwealth nations before any action could be taken.

Mr. Churchill emphasized this point when he insisted upon writing into the fourth article of the Atlantic Charter the phrase "with due regard for their existing obligations." He stated frankly at that time that although he himself had always favored the free trade principles of the nineteenth century, he was not able to commit himself in this regard without consulting the other members of the British Commonwealth. Those "existing obligations" to which he referred still remain.

THE EMPIRE PREFERENCE system was first worked out at the Imperial Economic Conference held in Ottawa in 1932. It is not impossible that Ottawa may soon be the scene of another parley, called this time with a view to scaling down imperial preferences. It is said that empire countries are being sounded out regarding a January conference. Undoubtedly this is a subject which Prime Minister King has been discussing with Britain's leaders during his present visit to the United Kingdom.

Any changes made in empire preference would have distinct repercussions on the separate economies of the commonwealth nations. Some would be affected to a greater degree than others.

Canadian officials have recently been attempting to estimate the effect which abolition of imperial preferences would have on Canada's trade with Britain. For seven years preceding the war, Britain was Canada's best customer. She bought from Canada more than twice as much as she sold to Canada. With the surpluses resulting from her British trade, Canada was able to finance her large imports from the United States. It was a neat three-way business.

Basing their studies on the trading experience of 1938, economists in Canada's Department of Trade and Commerce estimate that some 35 per cent of Canada's export trade to Britain would suffer severe consequences if empire preference were to be removed. Roughly 17 per cent would be affected to a lesser degree, and about 48 per cent would not be affected at all.

Amongst the chief export items which would not be affected by abolition of preference are: wheat, copper, nickel, bacon and hams, undressed furs, wood pulps, newsprint and asbestos. In this group, quota arrangements are more important than preferences. For instance, there is no preference on Canadian bacon going to Britain, but in prewar years there was always a quota which permitted Canadian shipments up to a certain poundage.

Amongst the items exported from Canada to Britain which would be seriously affected by loss of the preference are a number of manufactured or processed products: canned fruits and vegetables, pickles, photographic film, typewriters, rubber overshoes, fountain pens, dolls and toys. Altogether there are 196 items in this group.

GENERALLY SPEAKING, these are the sort of items which Britain will not buy in any case if she is short of Canadian dollars. If she gets the dollars by means of a U. S. loan, the United States will insist that Canada share the market with her by means of lowered preference. So whichever way it goes, Canada cannot win.

Quite aside from the issue of empire preference, Canada is as vitally interested as the United States in working out ways and means whereby Britain can pay for imports from this continent. During the war Canada has been exceeded only by the United States as a supplier of goods to the United Kingdom. The total of Canada's wartime financial aid to Britain stands at three billion dollars.

But with the termination of mutual aid (Canadian version of lend-lease) Canadian exports to the United Kingdom will drop by 50 per cent. Britain has now repatriated almost all her Canadian-held securities, and is desperately short of Canadian dollars. The problem of how she will pay for imports from Canada is being approached at Ottawa from two angles. First, the Import Branch of the Department of Trade and Commerce is giving serious study to the matter of increasing Canadian imports from Britain. This task is not made any easier by the fact that Canada's industrial capacity has grown tremendously during the war, enabling her to manufacture many items which she used to import. Second, Canada is considering a long-term low-interest loan (along the lines of the projected U. S. loan) which would supply Britain with credits to continue making purchases.

Washington Calling

Colonialism And Independence

IT IS A KIND of ostrichism to suggest that American labels should be taken off lend-lease weapons that may or may not be used in the present civil war in the Dutch East Indies.

No lend-lease weapons have gone to the Dutch in the Pacific since the fall of the Netherlands Indies early in the war. The only exception might be a trickle which went in to the underground during the Japanese occupation.

What is happening in Java and in French Indo-China is a flare-up of the fire that has been burning fiercely since long before the war. This manifestation of the passionate desire of yellow and brown peoples for independence is no new thing.

It cannot be written off as an aftermath of Japanese propaganda during the occupation. The Japs exploited it for their own purposes, albeit clumsily, since their own stupidities and cruelties were so obvious. And if we give them a chance, they will exploit it again.

These people look to the United States for leadership. Brig. Gen. Carlos P. Romulo, Resident Commissioner of the Philippines, made that clear in a remarkable article in Collier's recently.

"ESSENTIALLY," ROMULO WROTE, "the problem of the Pacific represents the race problem of the world. Ignore it, sidestep it, neglect it, and the next war will be a race war. But to work out a new pattern for the Pacific we need, not the Dutch approach, not the British approach, or any other approach except the human approach; and certainly we Filipinos have ample evidence to convince us the United States employs that approach."

Certainly we have made mistakes in the Philippines, grievous mistakes. We seem to have made serious errors since the liberation of the islands.

But they have not obscured the fact that long ago we set a date for independence and have continued ever since to work toward that date. This fact shines out like a light throughout Asia.

In the State Department, at certain levels, anyway, they have been trying for more than a year to anticipate the kind of trouble that is happening in the Netherlands Indies and in Indo-China today. They wanted to be prepared to bring together the colonial government, or their representatives, and the Nationalist leaders who would inevitably rise with liberation.

Confidential information out of Java indicates that the Nationalist Leader Soekarno has a genuine popular following. Inadequate and distorted news accounts have failed to give a true picture of what is happening there.

FOR THE BRITISH it is a source of acute embarrassment. Because the Dutch have no forces available, the responsibility for "keeping order" has fallen on the British, who have taken Indian troops in to suppress or at least to control the Indonesian Nationals. This has provoked a furious storm of protest from the press in India. And now a British general has been killed, further complicating a troubled situation.

While the Dutch at first indicated they would not treat with Soekarno, they have now modified this stand. The pressure of popular support has apparently made it necessary to negotiate with him.

In French Indo-China, fierce guerilla warfare continues. It is directed not against the occupying British, but against the French; and if the latter return in force, there is likely to be the kind of resistance that cannot be ignored in the world's headlines.

As Sumner Welles pointed out recently, the tragedy is that the United Nations Organization was not ready to meet this situation. It is not only, so far as the immediate issue is concerned, too late, but on the score of trusteeships and colonialism it is also too little. Partly on the insistence of the American delegation, the trusteeship provisions of the Charter were watered down.

All indications are, however, that American prestige in the Pacific is still high. We should be able to help negotiate an orderly transition between colonialism and independence.

Communications must carry writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the editor's discretion. Letters should be held to not more than 200 words. They are subject to condensation.

Atomic Solution

Obviously there are two phases of atomic energy development: (a) for military purposes, (b) for industrial and human advancement. The former has to be controlled, and, if possible, outlawed; the latter should be promoted to the fullest extent.

The fact that we possess the secret of making an atomic bomb for purposes of destruction must cause other nations to put all their scientific resources on the job of producing bigger and better bombs. If another nation had the secret and we did not, we would never rest until we also had the secret.

It is admitted by the scientists that our advantage is only for a limited time, and the problem is to find a way of stopping competitive research for the purpose of destruction. International agreement that the bomb will not be used for war purposes means nothing unless the use of the bomb by any nation would prove too dangerous to itself.

The bigger powers in the war just ended had vast reserves of deadly poison gasses which were not used only because each nation knew the other had it and could retaliate before being knocked out.

For industrial uses and for the advancement of humans in time of peace, atomic energy goes way beyond the considerations of competitive advantage. Like medicine, electricity, radio and all science affecting human well-being, it must be put on a plane high above industrial competition.

A solution to meet both problems might be as follows: Form an international body of the foremost scientists of the world to which all nations would be asked to contribute their best minds. Have all nations agree that atomic energy is outlawed for war purposes. Have all nations agree that this international body has access to their atomic energy research laboratories. Let this body publish papers on the important developments on atomic energy for general textbook use. This body of scientists would soon know if any one nation was withholding information, and possibly scientists of that nation could be invited to withdraw from the international body on proof of that nation's lack of cooperation. It would hardly seem that any nation could afford to be deprived of the benefit of membership.

New Book Exhibit

Going on at the Pan American Union Building is a unique book exposition—with more than 200 publishers of the United States and 17 Latin-American countries participating.

Everything in the whole field of literature, from comparative religion to cooking, from children's verse to higher mathematics, is covered by the exposition. The wide variety of formats and editorial techniques represented is also decidedly worth seeing, even for those those who understand nothing of Spanish or Portuguese. It will be open until November 12.

America's Two Faces

Americans tend to be an idealistic people who like to consider themselves on the side of the angels. It is fortunate that this attitude often leads us into an uncritical smugness about our own moral superiority.

The President's Navy Day speech offers a first rate example of this attitude. Mr. Truman wrapped himself in the mantle of U. S. idealism and suggested in effect, that it would be unthinkable for foreign power to suspect U. S. A. of an aggressive motive.

The same conviction also permits United States Senators to lambaste Russian imperialism in the Balkans while arguing that the U. S. A. should keep as strategic bases certain islands acquired during the war. Thus we become self-righteously moral in areas where our self-interest is not paramount such as Romania and Bulgaria, and imperialistic in the case of island bases.

A Russian, recalling the role of our military forces in Russia after World War I, and listening to the present contradictory aims of our foreign policy, might be pardoned if he suggested that there was an element of hypocrisy in Mr. Truman's statement of intentions. As Samuel Grafton pointed out recently, "Morality is either true everywhere or it isn't morality."

Nursery Propaganda

I read in the October 30 paper that the British are cutting from German fairy tales sections which might bring back to the German mind memories of Nazi atrocities Even Cinderella will thus be censured. To speak in the words of a caption under a recent photograph, this is going from the ridiculous to the ridiculous and is not exactly indicative of a higher sense of civilization and humor than that which the Nazis have chosen as their standard.

If the British rid the world of the "atrocities" committed by witches and wolves in fairy tales they will soon find it necessary to eliminate the atrocities committed by English kings in Shakespeare and ban from Germany the works of Dante, or even the Bible. And if they are afraid of the possible consequences of the reading of purely fictional atrocities in Germany they will not only have to purge all literature but also history. Incidents like the famous "English wooing," in which the English massacred in undeclared blitz warfare thousands of Scots, or the story of the dinner during which the civilized French murdered and slaughtered their guests, the Huguenots, are unquestionably too Nazi-like and should therefore be eliminated from German history books.

Otherwise the Germans, deprived of the "atrocity" stories of their own literature, might get the idea that blood, insanity and slaughter merely lives in the literature of the Anglo-Saxons, Italians, Romans, Greeks, Americans, Spaniards, etc., but not in their own.

Pacific Affairs

By Audrey Menefee

Malayan Awakening

DURING THE JAPANESE occupation, Malaya was more carefully veiled from the outside world than any other area of southeast Asia. Japanese radios carried no information at all beyond occasional praise for the Malay Sultan's "wholehearted collaboration" with the occupation authorities.

It has recently been revealed that Malaya had its own small but courageous army of guerillas, who played an important part in blocking Japanese exploitation of Malaya's people and her resources. The first regiment of the "Malayan People's Anti-Japanese Army" was formed a month after the fall of the peninsula. Composed mainly of Chinese residents in the beginning, it grew to a strength of several divisions before the war was over. It sabotaged oil tanks, ammunition dumps, bridges and communications; and it killed thousands of Japanese.

The flag of the Malay guerillas—three yellow stars on a red banner, symbolizing union of Malay, Chinese and Indian residents—was raised beside the British and Chinese flags along the road from Singapore to Kuala Lumpur, when the British returned to Malaya.

THE GUERILLAS are still active bringing in armed Japanese who are harassing the remoter areas of Malaya. And they are vocal. They are demanding a reward for their services in the way of better political and economic conditions for their country.

The new political consciousness is evident in every part of the peninsula. Unrest is reported from central Malaya, where demonstrators have paraded in several towns in the state of Perak displaying banners demanding employment, and more political rights. In one town a British civil affairs officer was seized as a hostage.

Dock workers in Singapore struck on October 21 in a demand for increased wages, and a few days later the transport workers and municipal government laborers walked out in sympathy. The British policy has been to go back to the 1941 wage level, in an attempt to force prices back to their 1941 level. After the wild inflation of the occupation period, 1941 wages look very small to most workers.

Even the conservative English-language paper in Singapore, the Straits Times, joined in the clamor for change. It charged that the British had not won the confidence of the Malayan people, and complained that the reoccupation policies seemed to be motivated only by the crude mechanism of laissez-faire orthodoxy." It urged the administration not to take as advisers persons who were residents of Malaya "during the halcyon days of commercial imperialism" as this was more apt to be a handicap than an advantage.

The Malayan Communist Party has also come into the open. It recently published a manifesto demanding improvements in the standard of living, relief for the unemployed, and freedom of speech and worship. The manifesto read very much like the Atlantic Charter applied to Malaya.

It seems clear that the Malays will never again look up to the British in the prewar manner, after their loss of face early in the war. Japanese promises of self-government, too, while largely discredited by Japanese actions, had some effect in intensifying native discontent with alien rule.

The British are meeting the challenge with statesmanship, and have already announced plans for Malaya's political, social and economic advancement. The London government is proposing that the nine Malayan states unite with the two British settlements of Penang and Malacca to form a Malayan Union. It is recommending a new Malayan citizenship, based on birth in Malaya or a suitable period of residence, which will mean a considerable constitutional change. Singapore, according to the plan, will become a separate Crown Colony.

SINCE BRITAIN is pledged to uphold the rule of the Malay Sultans in four federated states and five unfederated states, complications will arise in getting the reforms pushed through. Already reactionary Malay voices have been raised, warning the Sultans that if they give approval to the changes in citizenship requirements they will inherit "Chinese communists" as citizens. (In everal of the individual states the inhabitants are predominantly Chinese in racial origin; these people have always been more politically minded than the pure Malayas.)

Response to the British plan is generally favorable in both Malaya and Singapore. It would correct several long-standing evils. It would wipe out the network of political and fiscal boundaries which in the past made Malaya a miniature Balkans in the Far East; and it would do away with the discriminatory laws against Chinese and Indian residents.

The Straits Times criticized the separation of Singapore from "the real Malaya," on the grounds that this would encourage the insular and parochial outlook that was already developing before the war, and would further widen the gulf between Singapore and the mainland. But it also recognized a potential advantage in that Singapore, free from entanglement in mainland politics, could stimulate commercial enterprise and a political spirit which would make it the focal point for progress all over Malaya.

Military Training

Reader Opinion Sharply Divided

Universal military training is being advocated for preparedness against enemy attack as well as supplying a readily available offensive weapon. Past history should have made it clear that no amount of preparedness on one side will prevent attack. Rather, it will stimulate potential aggressors to arm themselves likewise. Fear of the tragic consequences of being the victim will serve to spur on aggression, since the aggressor in atomic warfare has a tremendous advantage.

The only real preparedness is prevention of war. Why not rely on international agreements and mutual cooperation between nations, perhaps through world-wide abolition of conscription and creation of international government above the sovereignty of any state? The least we can do is try. ALBERT H. LAWSON.
Laurel, Md., Oct. 29.

We need political vision and diplomacy of a new order. Rather than adopt peacetime conscription, we should seek an international agreement to abolish conscription; we should offer to share atomic information with any country willing to submit to an inspectorate to see that no atomic bombs are manufactured, and we should suggest amendments to transform UNO into federal world government. Until we cease thinking in military terms and become conscious of the political demands of the atomic age, we shall be sowing the seeds of our own destruction.
HUBERT MARSHALL.
Bowie, Md., Oct. 29.

With the President advocating peacetime conscription (if it's compulsory, it's conscription), we cannot expect other Nations to consider America as peace-loving. For the facts of our military defense are these: We possess superior protective forces—an incomparable Navy, the world's mightiest air force, the greatest industrial capacity and potential, and exclusive possession of the atomic bomb. Geographically, important military forces could be sent against us only by air and sea. It is therefore difficult to see any justification for a conscripted mass army.
ROBERT S. CAMBURN.
Bluemont, Va., Oct. 26.

What is needed is not compulsory training in the United States, Great Britain, Russia, France, et al., but the adoption of the proposal advanced by Representative Joseph Martin, that all nations agree to forego conscription. This is the minimum requirement for the creation of an environment in which the representatives of the peoples of the various world governments can work out the basic causes of war (nationalism, economic unbalance, power, imperialism), and within which the individual in society in all nations can free himself from the psychological factors which result in his acceptance of and acquiesence to war.
WERNER C. BAUM.
Washington, Oct. 25.

My chief objection to compulsory military training is that I believe it to be an undermining influence on the very American institutions which gave our country the real strength to carry it through crises.

To me the best preparedness is something that cannot be separated from our traditions of freedom from militarism, and he who advocates our selling our birthright for such "protection" knows not what he does.
LILLIAN HAYMAN KANEGIS.
Washington, Oct. 29.

President Truman, in urging universal military training, said that "nothing but pious hope and dangerous wishful thinking" has come from those who oppose conscription. The President seemingly forgot the Society of Friends and other peace groups which oppose conscription but have always offered the counter-proposal of unfailing good will as our Nation's best defense.

We know what unfailing good-will produces. Our relations with Canada and China are eloquent examples. Why then depart from the proven American way and take the road at the end of which our defeated enemies lie prostrate? J. STUART INNERST.
Lansdowne, Pa., Oct. 25.

Having read President Truman's speech on compulsory military training, three questions, with their implications, stick in my crop:

1. If, as has been assumed, atomic power will in the next war make present weapons and Army procedures obsolete, I would like to know why every man between 18 and 20 should be taught these weapons and procedures.

2. Why do we have to depend upon a militaristic setup to check social diseases, illiteracy and physical unfitness, and why cannot such things be taken care of by direct social legislation?

3. And why, if in the next war our enemies will be able to drop bombs on the United States, we must rely upon the horribly inadequate and stupid Army system to teach men in a year the secrets necessary to keep this from happening?

Unless there are logical answers to these questions I shall remain convinced that compulsory training is the greatest hoax yet to be fostered off on the American people.
SERGT. GILBERT CHURCH.
Camp Lee, Va., Oct. 24.

We do not at this time have the information needed to pass upon the question of peacetime military service. The uncertainties of atomic warfare demand further exploration. Nor can we wisely plan before we know whether the United Nations Organization is to be a 100 per cent dud or not. A practical disarmament program might be effected through that association. We cannot afford to weaken ourselves further by throwing billions on a scrap heap. Snap judgment is out of place. ADAM QUILL.
Washington, Oct. 27.

Please keep on working for compulsory military training. It is so necessary, and so short-sighted to feel we can hide behind atomic power. Look what happened when the French hid behind their Maginot Line.
WIFE AND MOTHER.
Fredericksburg, Va., Oct. 26.

Had our Nation been strong, prepared to take immediate retaliatory action, we would not have been attacked by Japan any more than a burglar, intent on robbery, attacks a "victim" as well armed or stronger than himself.

We have paid a very heavy price in lives of young men. These men died because we were too weak immediately to defend ourselves from predatory powers. This has happened twice in recent history. It will happen again if we fail to back up moral leadership with physical strength.
RAY BAKER HARRIS.
Washington, Oct. 23.

While I am conscious of the sacrifices involved by our young men who will give a year of military training for the defense of their country, it seems to me this will, in the long run, be cheaper than what our young men have given in this war. For I am convinced that if America had been even half prepared in 1939 this war might have never started. I will never forget the long discourses of poor Mr. Roosevelt on international morality and his repeated appeals to Mussolini, Hitler and Hirohito for peaceful negotiation. These appeals were ignored by the aggressors because they knew that America was not prepared to enforce its reasonable and peaceful aspirations. In fact, Mr. Roosevelt was rediculed and derided in all enemy countries for having to make such appeals. ERIAN BOUTROS.
Washington, Oct. 25.

Compulsory military training not only enables a young man to be of future value to his country but gives him an opportunity to learn more than one trade for himself. So I say I'm glad to know my sons will be able to get training, as I did between 1923 and 1927 in the Navy, without cost to themselves.
CAPT. LEE R. HOLT.
Gamboa, Canal Zone, Oct. 23.

Granted that there is well-organized opposition to the adoption of peacetime military training on a compulsory basis, regardless of whether we call it universal service, conscription or any other name, and there is revulsion at seeing the caste system of the Army and the lamentable personnel policies of the Army continued in peacetime, none of the opposition has suggested a reasonable substitute. Any suggestion must be realistic enough to work. Disarmament treaties have proven failures in the past. The writer feels that much of the opposition to the proposed program is due to a dislike of some of the Army methods and hopes that some improvements will cause an acceptance of the training.

The Gallup Poll

Truman Continues Popular But Loses Some Ground

By George Gallup
Director of American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 1.—President Truman's popularity with American voters is somewhat lower than it was a few months ago, but he continues to hold the approval of a vast majority.

In spite of slow progress in international affairs and some criticism of the White House for its economic and labor policies, more than 8 in every 10 voters from coast to coast approve of the way Mr. Truman is handling his job as President.

The latest test of presidential popularity was conducted by the Institute on the question:

Do you approve or disapprove of the way Truman is handling his job as President?

	Today	July
Approve	82%	87%
Disapprove	9	3
No opinion	9	10

One important explanation of Mr. Truman's popularity is that the majority of American voters believe he is following a middle-of-the-road policy and want him to do just that, a poll in early September showed.

While today's survey was measuring Mr. Truman's popularity here, the British Institute of Public Opinion (British Gallup Poll) was conducting a test of the popularity of Britain's new chief executive, Prime Minister Clement Attlee. Mr. Attlee came to power as Winston Churchill's successor approximately three and a half months after Mr. Truman succeeded President Roosevelt in the White House.

The new British Prime Minister seems to have less unified support in his country than Mr. Truman does here, as the following indicates:

Do you approve or disapprove of Mr. Attlee as Prime Minister?

Poll in Britain

Approve	66%
Disapprove	19
No opinion	15

Winston Churchill during the days of his greatest popularity stood as high as 90 per cent in British polls. President Roosevelt's highest point in American polls which began in 1935 was 84 per cent in January, 1942, shortly after the Pearl Harbor disaster had rallied the Nation behind the Administration.

Of course, the Truman figure in today's poll does not mean that if he were running for reelection he would receive 82 per cent of the vote, or anything near it. The survey is merely a test of general attitude without reference to partisan considerations, or the strict adherence to party lines found during election campaigns. The last poll on presidential preference, in early August, found 58 per cent of the voters favoring the Democratic Party in 1948.

The attitude of 1944 Roosevelt voters and Dewey voters toward Mr. Truman's work in office is as follows in today's survey:

	1944 Roosevelt Voters	1944 Dewey Voters
Approve	88%	75%
Disapprove	5	14
No opinion	7	11

However, the Dewey voters show less regard for Mr. Truman now than they did four months ago. At that time the vote of approval in the poll was 89 per cent among Dewey voters, as compared to 75 per cent today. The Democratic figure of 88 per cent has remained unchanged.

Major Tie-up in Deliveries Of Petroleum Looms in D. C.

A major tieup of Metropolitan area petroleum deliveries loomed here last night, as picketing of 12 District freight hauling firms entered its ninth day.

M. I. O Boyle and Sons, reported to handle at least 70 per cent of all petroleum products moved by truck in this area, is threatened with a walkout of some 60 drivers, it was learned. The men are members of Local 355, Teamsters International Union (AFL) of Baltimore.

About 260 drivers of Local 639, meanwhile, continued their strike against major freight delivery concerns here. Spokesmen for both the companies and the union said negotiations are still deadlocked.

The Baltimore teamsters' union this week filed a strike notice with the National Labor Relations Board, charging company refusal to grant wage boost demands. A strike notice has also been filed by employes of the Coastal Tank Lines of York, Pa., which operates seven trucks in the District.

According to Richard M. O'Boyle, manager of the O'Boyle Co., drivers are seeking a wage boost from 85 cents to $1.00 per hour. He said a company offer to pay an hourly wage of 90 cents had been rejected.

Both the O'Boyle Co. and Coastal Tank Lines handle intracity and over-the-road deliveries of alcohol, kerosene and gasoline. O'Boyle said his company makes deliveries for a majority of oil companies and military installations in this area. He cited the Naval Air Station at Ancostia, the Naval Powder Factory at Indian Head, Md., the Quantico Marine Base and Fort Meade.

"We move half a million gallons of petroleum products daily, he declared.

The U. S Conciliation Service in Baltimore is scheduled to confer with union and management representatives next Monday, it was reported.

Krug Lauds Keenan, Golden Resigning From Staff of WPB

Chairman J. A. Krug of the War Production Board said last night that labor leaders working on WPB's staff throughout the war had done the Nation a great service in helping to solve critical production problems.

Reviewing the wartime achievements of the Office of Manpower Requirements and the Office of Labor Production, he said "The active participation or labor in Government proved its worth in accomplishing the tremendous production that conquered the Axis."

He summarized the "accomplishments of the labor offices in announcing the resignations of Joseph D. Keenan, vice chairman for Labor Production, and Clinton S. Golden, vice chairman for Manpower Requirements.

Keenan will resume his former position as secretary of the Chicago Federation of Labor (AFL), but will continue as labor adviser to the new civilian production administration which supersedes WPB tomorrow. Golden will return to his post as assistant to President Philip Murray, of the United Steel Workers of America (CIO.)

Krug said that labor participation in WPB's work helped local unions to understand WPB policies and "their understanding served to enlist their active cooperation in attaining the objectives."

Men from organized labor, he said, worked to improve plant conditions, prevent strikes, to adjust hours and shifts for women workers and to iron out transportation, health and nutrition problems.

Bowles Doubts Living Costs Will Decrease

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer.

The Government's new wage-policy will have no appreciable effect on the cost of living, Price Administrator Chester Bowles said yesterday, indicating that the number of price ceiling increases resulting from it will be slight.

Its provision for manufacturers to make wage increases and come to OPA six weks later for ceiling adjustments will not bring the agency much additional busines, he predicted.

Sees Costs Down

"My hunch is that many of the industries are going to be surprised at how much their costs go down when they get started. The six-months provision encourages them to take a risk, but we don't anticipate tat many of them are going to need the price increase," he told a pres and radio conference.

Bowles said OPA will announce retail price ceilings for all makes of automobiles within the next five days, and that other ceilings to be announced within 10 days would be for innerspring mattresses, vacuum cleaners, and small electrical appliances.

Have Met Promise

"That will complete our major reconversion pricing job," he said, "and anyone who has been following the prices we have set will realize that we have been able to meet our promise about 1942 prices in most instances."

Retail automobile dealers will have to absorb some of the increase granted manufacturers to cover labor and materials, he declared. "I'd like to make it clear," he said, "that no exception is to be made for the auto dealers." He said he had been informed that dealers would fight OPA's cost absorption plan "with everything at their monnand" and had represented themselves as probably "the strongest dealer group in the country."

Bowles said dealers under the new prices would make as much money per automobile sold—and maybe more—than they made in 1941 and were objecting to a cut in their percentage of mark-up. The prewar mark-up averaged 24 per cent for the dealers as a group, he said, but this was lowered to about 12 per cent by the trade-ins of old cars.

Taking the "mythical automobile priced at $1000," Bowles said the dealers wanted a profit of $240 on it, where OPA was looking at the actual prewar money made by the dealers rather than the percentage mark-up and considered that the profit on such a car should run "maybe from $120 to $130."

Asked what would happen if OPA were no longer in existence six months after an industry gave wage increases, Bowles declared: "Then there would be only one major problem—inflation."

The pricing executive predicted that radio prices would be the first in the reconversion field to "fall below OPA ceilings." "The radio industry is obviously highly competitive and, if I were betting, I would sa yradios would be the first things to get out from under OPA by going under their ceilings," he said.

Two Ways Available

Bowles reiterated his belief that "there are two ways to look at what we expect from our economy during the next two or three years." One can think of the new market only as a repetition of 1941, he declared, "thinking of 1941 models and prices and of filling up the demands on this basis," or one can "get some perspective" and think in terms of making the economy function on a basis of speedier output, new models, lower prices and more profits.

"Sooner or later," he asserted, "the market created during the war is going to be dried up or at least back to its 1941 level—if you take the first view," while persons adopting the second view are looking forward to an expanded economy which will be self-sustaining.

Maine, Idaho Neck and Neck In Potato Test

A high Government testing committee yesterday confirmed there are no finer potatoes than those grown in Maine—except those grown in Idaho.

Potato-judges-for-a-day Comptroller General Lindsay Warren and four women legislators, Representatives Clare Boothe Luce (R., Conn.); Helen Gahagan Douglas (D., Calif.); Edith Nourse Rodgers (R., Mass.), and Emily Taft Douglas (D., Ill.), with a disregard for calories, ate heartily of Maine-and-Idaho potatoe soup, fried potatoes and baked potatoes.

Replete with spuds (and a fish and poultry course) they said they were compelled by good taste to declare the contest a draw.

The potatoe partaking was conducted inobstrusively in a small Senate dining room in which were gathered the legislative contingents of Maine and Idaho, their families and the press. The whole proceeding was broadcast on a MBS coast-to-coast hook-up.

Swope Protests Ouster Of Newsman by British

New York, Nov. 1 (U.P.).—Herbert Bayard Swope, chairman of the Overseas News Agency board of directors, today assailed the expulsion of an ONA correspondent from Palestine last week by British military authorities as worse than "anything we have heard of Russia."

Swope in telegrams to Secretary of War Patterson and Maj. Gen. Alexander D. Surles, director of the War Department Bureau of Public Relations, renewed his demand for an explanation of the action taken with the cooperation of American military authorities in the Middle East.

Doctors Sought For Veterans' Medical Tests

Members of the District Medical Society will be asked to volunteer their services on a fee basis to take care of a backlog of 1000 local veterans awaiting physical examinations in connection with pension claims.

Dr. W. Cabell Moore, chairman of the society's committee on industrial medicine, and Theodore Wiprud, society secretary, will meet with Maj. Spencer V. Meade, chief medical officer of the Veterans' Administration, Monday, to map an immediate workable plan of hours and compensation.

Specialists most needed by the Veterans' Administration are psychiatrists, ear, eye, nose and throat men, surgeons, eye doctors and specialists in internal medicine and orthopedic surgery. They will be paid by the VA at fees comparable to those paid in workmen's compensation cases.

Examinations will be made in doctors' offices and at temporary volunteer clinic at Mount Alto Hospital.

Due to shortage of doctors and medical facilities, only 15 examinations are now being made daily at the regional VA office. The situation will become more acute when nearby county veterans are transferred to the Washington regional office in mid-November.

Infants' White Shoes To Be More Plentiful

Infants' white shoes, hard to find for months, should be plentiful again soon, the War Production Board said yesterday.

Prospects are looking up because the ingredient used to whiten leather, titanium, is available once more for civilian products.

Government shoe and leather officials predicted also that the end of shoe rationing will be a factor in increasing supplies of infants' footwear.

Men of Firm Convictions Greatest Need, Wiley Says

Senator Alexander Wiley (R., Wis.) said yesterday that the great need of today "is men with convictions, courage, justice and wisdom to stand firm."

The legislator, in an address at the Washington Lutheran Laymen's Fellowship luncheon at the Willard Hotel, said the big question of the day is whether America can qualify for the position of eminence and leadership into which she has been thrust.

Senator Wiley, a Lutheran, said that spiritual power is the only antidote for fear and worry which he said has been aggravated by "atomic jitters and atomic hysteria."

The Rev. Robert E. Van Deusen, M. A., who yesterday became new pastor of the Lutheran Service Center, was presented at the meeting and spoke briefly. His predecessor, Dr. Carl Becker, who is going to Madison, Wis., was given a rising vote of thanks at the meeting for his services to the center. Mr. Van Deusen comes from the Kansas City Lutheran Service Center.

Dr. Becker presented an outline of the immediate objectives of the Lutheran Laymen's Fellowship. They include acquisition of headquarters for a Lutheran Center for metropolitan Washington, welfare activities, personal, social and community evangelism and public relations.

Property Sale For Back Taxes Being Planned

District finance officials yesterday mapped plans for a tax sale of more than 6000 pieces of real estate which have become tax delinquent in the last two years.

A public auction is expected to be held on January 15 in the tax collector's office where citizens can bid for a right to pay the delinquent tax on any of the property, Tax Collector Guy W. Pearson revealed.

Winner of the bids may get title to the properties after a two-year waiting period. If the owners decide to reimburse the bidders before that time expires the bidders still get the interest which would accrue against the owners up to the time they redeem the tax.

More than $300,000 in taxes are owed on the 6000 pieces of real estate, Pearson estimated.

The sum is a two-year accumulation because the District skipped its regular sale last January. Paper shortages prevented newspaper advertising that is required before such auctions are held, Pearson explained.

Bids from newspapers for the advertising work this year have already been submitted to the Commissioners.

Owners of the properties to be listed for tax sale are now being notified to pay up by November 19 or let an auctioneer find a willing payer, the tax collector said. Many persons, however, are rushing in to pay as a result of the threat or for fear of the advertising.

The number of delinquent taxes on real estate has been dropping as a result of wartime prosperity, Pearson stated. Taxes on 15,000 pieces of real estate were auctioned off in 1942, but the last sale two years ago involved only 5480 cases.

Meanwhile, the tax collector has finished sending out final warnings to some 7000 delinquent personal property taxpayers who will face court proceedings unless immediate payment is made.

MacArthur Denies Konoye Acting for Him

Tokyo, Nov. 1 (U.P.).—Gen. Douglas MacArthur today repudiated a political buildup being given "Liberal" Prince Fumimaro Konoye by denying that he had sponsored the former Premier's activity in revising the Japanese constitution.

In an unprecedented statement, MacArthur denied reports that he had sponsored Konoye's attempt to revise the constitution. The Allied commander in chief said that he had ordered the constitution revised and that any work done on it by Konoye was undertaken in behalf of Emperor Hirohito.

This statement apparently ended the reported role of Konoye as an important link between the Emperor and the Japanese government on one hand and MacArthur on the other, a role which might ultimately put him in the premiership.

Ugaki Wants to Quit

At the same time, however, War Minister Gen. Sadamu Shimomura announced that 76-year-old Gen. Kazushige Ugaki, for years a foe of the militarists, had asked to give up his army title, apparently with a view to reentering politics.

It was indicated that Ugaki, who sacrificed a brilliant career as a soldier and statesman in his fight against the war lords, might soon emerge as a political leader backed by liberal forces.

Shimomura said that the army had not yet decided, "for various reasons," to let Ugaki resign.

U. S. Demand Stirs Japs

Tokyo, Nov. 1 (AP).—A startled Japan learned today that America may require Emperor Hirohito himself to pay part of the defeated nation's untotaled reparations bill.

Whether Hirohito's personal fortune of 106 million dollars could be considered more than a drop in the reparations bucket was a minor matter in Tokyo. Far more important to Japanese was the sudden thought that Washington's decision indirectly labels their Emperor as a war criminal.

Heretofore his fortune has been considered inviolate. Even the recent Allied demands for the imperial bankbooks stirred silent resentment.

Dying Va. Boy Clears Hunter

Pulaski, Va., Nov. 1 (AP).—Leon Mayberry, 16-year-old schoolboy, died at a Pulaski hospital last night fro ma gunshot wound received while he was hunting on Tuesday near Rays School in Pulaski County.

A charge from a .22-caliber rifle held by Junior Smith, 13, was said to have struck Mayberry in the abdomen. A death-bed statement by young Mayberry said the shot was accidental.

Leaders Pledge Labor Parley Cooperation

By the Associated Press

Both labor and employer representatives said after talks with President Truman yesterday that they pledged cooperation in the labor-management peace conference.

CIO President Philip Murray and Ira Mosher, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, told newsmen they informed Mr. Truman they were entering the conference, beginning next Monday, with open minds.

Twenty-four union and management delegates and alternates to the conference were called in yesterday by the President.

Lewis' First Visit in Four Years

Included in the group was John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, who had not set foot in the White House in four years. He had broken with President Roosevelt prior to the 1940 elections, but attended a labor-management conference in the White House, December 17, 1941, when the no-strike no-lockout pledge was given.

Asked what he believed would be the outcome of the conference, Lewis declined comment.

The forthcoming sessions are to devise some machinery to replace the War Labor Board, which was created out of the 1941 conference, too.

All morning long the President greeted and talked with little groups of four or five of the conference delegates. He will see more of them today.

NAM POLLING MEMBERS

In connection with the conference, the National Association of Manufacturers is polling its members on their attitude toward questions scheduled to come up.

The association sent 15,000 wires to employes asking their views on creation of new Federal Machinery, or other machinery, for handling future disputes; whether they favor voluntary arbitration and similar topics.

A meeting of the 18 NAM and U. S. Chamber of Commerce delegates and their alternates will be held today, by which time the NAM hopes to have a substantial number of replies tabulated to guide their policy.

Among several management spokesmen interviewed, opinion seemed solid that industry wanted some commitment on full observance of contracts from the labor group.

Mutual Trust Essential

"There cannot be any basis for collective bargaining unless the parties trust each other," said one influential delegate who would not be quoted by name prior to the conference start.

This executive indicated he would favor creation of a new Federal agency, which would handle only stoppages affecting industries across State lines or of vital public interest.

A temporary Federal agency to handle wage and other labor questions of the building industry during reconversion only was proposed yesterday by Richard J. Grey, acting chairman of the executive council of the AFL's Building Trades Council.

Grey would have such an independent agency patterned after the emergency boards set up under the Railway Labor Act, he told a meeting of the construction industry advisory council, under U. S. Chamber of Commerce auspices.

Police Shoot Youth After Auto Chase

From Yesterday's Late Editions

A 19-year-old youth was shot by police last night following a reported 70-mile-an-hour chase through Southeast Washington into Maryland.

The victim, Glenwood Barkdoll, 19, of Capitol Heights, Md., riding with another youth and two girls, had been chased by police from Benning rd. ne., into Capitol Heights, Md.

The chase began when police observed the speeding car on Benning rd. The car failed to stop at police sirens, and the chase was on.

In Maryland, the fugitive car turned off on a dirt road and stopped. Driver of the police scout car, Pvt. Jerome Di Tripani, Eleventh Precinct, approached from one side. His partner, R. H. Wolf, came from the other. Di Tripani attempted to arrest the driver, was overpowered and was thrown to the ground, Wolf said.

Wolf took the second young man into custody, and saw that the car's driver was attempting to choke Di Tripani, he said. Wolf reported that Di Tripani's assailant attempted to reach the latter officer's gun, and then he shot the man through the hip.

Both Di Tripani and Barkdoll were taken to Casualty Hospital. The policeman received first aid and was released and Barkdoll was admitted for treatment.

Police reported Barkdoll's companion was a 17-year-old Hillside, Md., youth. The two girls were released after questioning.

More Servicemen Arriving at 4 U. S. Ports

These names were telegraphed directly to The Washington Post by the Associated Press. There is no assurance that the list is correct, because it was compiled in Europe and at Pacific bases previous to embarkation, but officials said that the margin of error is slight. Relatives should not contact the port or The Washington Post for further information.

Westinghouse is proud of the part it has played in the development of electrical transportation in Washington.
Forty years ago Capital Transit received its first Westinghouse equipped streetcar. Today the all-electric car on display, and over half of Capital Transit's streetcars, are Westinghouse equipped.
Since the inception of the P. C. C. Car, Westinghouse has cooperated with the Transit Research Corporation and all P. C. C. Car operators and builders in developing the best in electric transit.

WE ARE PROUD TO HAVE CONTRIBUTED TO THE

"Cavalcade of Progress"

SLEEK, trim and easy to look at, Washington will be proud of the color-styled street cars to be displayed at Transit's "Cavalcade of Progress" on F St., between 14th and 15th Sts. N.W., on Saturday, November 3rd, and Sunday, November 4th.

Capital Transit Company, one of the most progressive systems in the country, created the exhibit to give Washington's transit riders a more attractive and comfortable service. One of the features will be an all-electric streetcar. G. E. research, over a period of many years, has contributed to the development of all-electric transit equipment. Electricity opens and closes the doors, powers the ventilating and lighting systems, brakes the car smoothly and safely and holds it at rest. Electric protective devices prevent the car from moving when the doors are open. These and many other additional safety features give you multiple protection.

We are proud that our resources and research have helped you to get where you are going faster, without strain and hazard of driving. Keep on using transit vehicles for your riding pleasure and convenience.

Be sure to see the all-electric car at Transit's Cavalcade of Progress, created and presented for Washington's transit riders by Capital Transit Company. The exhibit is open to the public from 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday, November 3rd and 4th, on F St. between 14th and 15th Sts. N.W.

Commons Sets Day to Debate Truman Views

London, Nov. 1 (U.P.).—Members of commons will debate President Truman's Navy Day outline of United States foreign policy Wednesday, two days before Prime Minister Clement Attlee is scheduled to depart for Washington and a meeting with the President.

Whether the debate would cover the question of control of atomic energy was not clear. There were some signs that the question might be avoided.

Observers believed that the debate was designed to "clear the air" for Attlee before his departure. Both he and former Prime Minister Winston Churchill will speak.

In commons today, government spokesmen resisted suggestions that the debate also consider the breakdown of the foreign ministers' council. Herbert Morrison, lord president of the council and government leader in commons, said he believed the foreign office would think it "inappropriate" to include the ministers' council discussions.

Thus it appeared that the debate, while covering any differences which have arisen between the United States and Britain, would not encompass British-Russian differences.

Foundation to Commemorate Roosevelt's Life Is Created

By the Associated Press

Creation of a foundation to commemorate the life of Franklin D. Roosevelt was announced at the White House yesterday after a meeting of the incorporators.

President Truman, the announcement said, will serve as honorary president and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt as honorary chairman.

George E. Allen, Washington insurance man, was chosen president of the foundation. The vice presidents are former Secretary of State Cordell Hull, former Secretary of Labor Francis Perkins, Secretary of Commerce Wallace and Marshall Field, Chicago publisher. Joseph E. Davies, former Ambassador to Russia, was named secretary-treasurer.

Allen said in a statement the foundation will endeavor to set up a memorial which will be dedicated to "encouraging the perpetuation of the ideals and objectives of this great American and world leader."

Allen said the foundation soon will start a drive to obtain funds to carry on its program. It will select from many suggestions which Allen said had been received, a project intended to carry on the "broad humanitarian purposes" to which the late President dedicated himself.

Mr. Roosevelt, Allen said, gave his life:

First, to bring security and a decent standard of living to all his countrymen.

"Second, to overthrow nazism and fascism all over the world, and to bring about lasting world peace under the principles of the Atlantic Charter and the four freedoms."

Allen added that the foundation will not overlap or interfere with "the noble work of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis."

Members of the executive committee are Robert E. Sherwood, playwright, chairman; Samuel I. Rosenman, special White House counsel, vice chairman; Allen, President William L. Green of the American Federation of Labor; President Philip Murray of the CIO; Harry L. Hopkins, Roosevelt confidante; Fleet Admiral William D. Leahy; former Treasury Secretary Henry Morgenthau, jr.; Miss Perkins, Franklin D. Roosevelt jr., and Frank Walker, former Postmaster General.

District May Buy Coast Guard Ship For Fire Patrol

Three District officials will go to Buxport, S. C., Monday to inspect Coast Guard ships there and perhaps to recommend one of them for purchase by the District as a new fire boat.

Making the trip are District Purchasing Officer Roland Brennan, Fire Chief Stephen Porter and Chief O. E. Fearn, superintendent of machinery for the Fire Department.

They will examine two surplus diesel-powered craft and a 30-foot jet-propelled craft as possible successors to the District's 39-year-old fire boat, the Firefighter.

Uniformed Girls in D. C. To Disappear Shortly

DEMOBILIZED: The uniformed girl will be missing from the post-war Washington scene. The 20-odd thousand Waves, Wacs, Spars, and Marines here will be largely demobilized within the next eight months. This mass discharge will open up thousands of living quarters for the civilian Government girls as there is talk now of converting military barracks where many military girls live into dormitories for the civilian girls. The housing problem of the single Government girl will be solved quickly if the plans go through. Something unquestionably will be done as there would be no point in tearing down the barracks when living space is at a premium. However, disposition of the space is something the military service must decide.

KLUTTZ

WAVES: Vice Admiral L. E. Denfeld, chief of the Bureau of Naval Personnel, estimates that the Wave strength will be cut from 75,000 to 8400 by next June 30. The 8400 would be made up of 1000 officers and 7400 enlisted girls. In Washington, he said, will be between 1000 and 2000 Waves by that date. About 16,000 are stationed here now. It's reported on good authority that the Navy will propose to Congress that the Wave organization be made a permanent branch of the Navy. The Navy, it's said, would like to keep about 5000 Waves throughout the country in peacetime to handle military jobs in its communication centers and hospitals. Waves are gradually being taken off civilian work and they are being replaced by civilians in clerical jobs.

SPARS: This Coast Guard branch, which at one time reached 10,000 enlisted girls and 1000 officers, will be wiped out completely by June 30. About 900 Spars are stationed here. Rear Admiral F. J. Gorman, chief of Coast Guard's planning and control staff, says: "I do not see how any successful system of administration of a Spar organization can be worked out in peacetime for these reasons: Ninety per cent of their duties parallel the work of Civil Service employes. Consequently, if you have a Spar organization you must eliminate or reduce markedly the Civil Service force. They would be stagnant so far as promotions are concerned, because there would not be any system of promotion except to fill vacancies. A Spar organization filling all billets in the shore establishments would keep men at sea forever in such ratings as yeoman and storekeeper, and no system of rotation between ship and shore duty for all the men could be devised."

MARINES: Gen. Alexander A. Vandegrift, commandant, reports he will reduce the Marine Women's Reserve from 18,000 enlisted girls to 2638 and officers from 1000 to 200 by June 30. The organization, he says, "will completely vanish out of the picture by September of next year." Sizable reductions will be made on the first of each quarter, on January 1, April 1, and July 1. The girls, the commandant says, "have been most efficient and most satisfactory." The law that set up the Marine Reserve expires on September 1 and Vandegrift won't ask that it be continued. There are more than 1000 Marine girls stationed in Washington.

WACS: Information on the Army girls is difficult to obtain. The War Department, apparently, can't make up its mind on the future of the Wac organization. However, it is clear that the Wacs will be largely demobilized within a year though the process will be a bit slower and drawn out. Gen. H. H. Arnold, Chief of the Army Air Forces, is one of those who wants to keep Wacs in his organization. He said: "If they permit me to have Wacs," he said, "I would like it because I have found they can replace one, two, and three soldiers in some instances." The general has 37,130 Wacs on duty in the Air Forces and he expects to have only 8000 by next June 30.

DIARY NOTES: Hearings on the Downey pay bill were postponed yesterday until today. Senators Byrd, Hart and Hicklenlooper had to attend a meeting of the atomic bomb committee . . . Jesse Manbeck of the Typographical Union will ask the committee to add an amendment which would give a 10 per cent increase to wage board employes in the Government Printing Office and the Bureau of Engraving and Printing . . . Harry S. Littman has resigned as assistant general counsel of the Federal Power Commission to practice law here . . . Joseph F. Carroll, former G-man, has been appointed to head up a compliance division within the Surplus Property Administration to prevent fraud and favoritism . . . The War Department will reopen its Picatinny Arsenal in New Jersey . . . Carl H. Monsees, assistant deputy administrator of Surplus Property, had developed a plan to bring in various business groups to assist in property disposal . . . H. C. Albin is the new director of Agriculture's special commodities branch.

Crowds Attend All Saints Day Services Here

Catholic and Episcopal churches were crowded yesterday for the annual All Saints' Day observance. It was a Holy Day of Obligation in Catholic churches.

Comdr. Glenn

The Right Rev. Msgr. Lawrence J. Shehan, pastor of St. Patrick's Catholic Church, 10th and G sts. nw., reported the largest crowds in many years at All Saints' Day masses, two of which were held in the school hall for overflow crowds. Eleven masses were celebrated from 6 a. m. until 12:35 p. m.

On All Souls' Day, which will be observed today, prayers will be said for departed friends and relatives.

All Saints' Day also marked the return of Lieut. Comdr. C. Leslie Glenn to his pulpit at St. John's Episcopal Church, Lafayette Square, after a four years' absence. He was chaplain on the battleship Alabama. When he celebrated Communion yesterday at noon at St. John's, it was the first anniversary of his first service aboard the Alabama.

The Rev. Armand T. Eyler yesterday led his St. Margaret's Episcopal congregation in the All Satints' Day observance, and also marked the fifth anniversary of his rectorship here. The church is at Connecticut ave. and Bancroft pl. nw. Mr. Eyler is former pastor of Trinity Church, St. Augustine, Fla., and is past president of the Washington Ministerial Union.

Women Voters Urge Haste in Aiding Europe

Pressure for immediate aid to Europeans is being exerted by the Arlington-Alexandria League of Women Voters, who charge that unless Europe's needs are met, there will be a "golden opportunity for some Hitler to take the lead."

The Virginia league chapters have prepared a window display for an Arlington store which emphasizes the inequality between American diet and food available in Europe. It points out that an American family of four consumes more milk in one day than is available for a Dutch of French family of the same size in an entire week.

League sponsors of the display urged all who shared their concern for the welfare of Europe to "write to the President and Congress, so that funds which this country already has pledged to the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration may be made available at once, and other steps be taken to aid the starving and shivering in Europe and Asia."

Study to Start On Plans for New State Building

Richmond, Va., Nov. 1 (AP).—The five-man committee appointed by Governor Darden to select a site for the propsed new State office building will meet at 3 p. m. Friday to begin its study, David V. Chapman, chairman of the committee, said today.

Chapman, State superintendent of grounds and buildings, said the group will review all phases of plans for construction and development on Virginia's historic Capitol Square property.

Appointment of the committee by Governor Darden is the outgrowth of a recommendation made by Chapman at recent budget hearings when he asserted that an urgent need exists for a new building to house many agencies of the State government now badly overcrowded.

He recommended an appropriation of two million dollars for the new structure, and Governor Darden has indicated he would see this item is asked of the General Assembly in the appropriations bill.

Navy Officer Stops at Hotel He Managed

Running a mess on an aircraft carrier is a little different from running a hotel dining roome—ven a big hotel dining room.

You can take it from Lieut. Comdr. H. H. Tege, USNR, who is spendinga few days here at the Broadmoor Hotel—which he managed before the joined the Navy in October, 1942.

Since then he's done a little traveling, first oin the USS Ranger and the on the USS Randolph, where, as ward room mes officer, he kept the carrier pilots fed as they pounded away at the Japs in the first and second raids on Tokyo, at the Iwo Jima landings, at Okinawa, Kyushu, Minami Daito Shima, and right up to the final victory attack on the Jap mainland last July and August.

Through Kamikaze raids—the Randolph suffered 175 casualties in one—the long 74-day vigil with Admiral Halsey's fleet that preceded VJ-Day and the Okinawa typhoon, it was Tegge's job to keep the morale up with good food. It required "a little ingenuity, for toward the end stocks were running low and we had to dres up dehydrated stuff and make them like it."

Occasionally Tegge was able to surprise the boys with delicacies. One wary day, when the going had been particularly rough, the men came in expecting dehydrates and found a feast consisting of shrimp cocktail, fresh green peace, roast Maryland turkey and strawberry shortcake.

"You should have seen them go for it," Tegge said. "You see I had purchased this supply of frozen foods in San Francisco before we left and saved it for just such an occasion."

Tegge returned on the Randolph for the Navy Day celebration in Baltimore. After a few days' rest here he plans to go to South Dakota for some pheasant-shooting. Then, on Nov. 10, he'll report to his new ship, the USS Franklin D. Roosevelt. What will his new job be?

"Mess officer, I guess," he said. "They seem to have me tagged."

Poultry Firm Wins Cut in Fine on Appeal

Winchester, Va., Nov. 1 (Spl.).—Judge Burr P. Harrison, hearing three appeal cases from Police Court against the Hanover Poultry Co., yesterday held the firm guilty of operating a slaughter house within 200 feet of a dwelling and in violation of a city ordinance but materially reduced fines which had been assessed against the company.

Judge Harrison fixed a fine of $100 and costs in each case. The original fines against Irvin Burman trading as the Hanover Poultry Co. and Charles R. Bish, manager, totaled $1200.

Since the cases were heard the firm has ceased business operations here.

Hospital Head Leaves

Frederick, Md., Nov. 1 (Spl.).—Miss Davena A. Somerville, R. N., today terminated her duties as superintendent of Frederick City Hospital. She plans to leave later this week for Sarasota, Fla., where she plans a long rest. Officials of the hospital plan to announce the name of her successor shortly.

CAN'T KEEP GRANDMA IN HER CHAIR

She's as Lively as a Youngster—Now her Backache is better

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys. The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. Doan's give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

British Gunboat Battled Jap Fleet in Shanghai

Shanghai, Nov. 1.—One of the great "now it can be told" stories of the war was revealed here today.

The 300-ton British gunboat Peterel, surrounded by Japanese cruisers and destroyers in Shanghai harbor on December 8, 1941, the day after Pearl Harbor, refused to surrender, and fought to the last with her machine guns against the point-blank fire of the enemy's heavy guns.

The Peterel's main armament of two 3-inch guns, was already out of action. All she had in working order were two machine guns.

A Japanese officer came out to the Peterel in a launch and ordered her immediate surrender. Lieut. Stephen Polkinghorn, the New Zealand commanding officer, said: "I refuse to surrender, go away."

The Japanese officer ordered his launch away to a safe distance and then fired a red Verey light.

Immediately, the Japanese cruisers and destroyers opened fire—some of them only 200 yards from the Peterel. Shore batteries joined in the fusilade. The Peterel gallantly returned fire with her two machine guns. Shells tore into her frail upper works and hull and in a few moments the gunboat was ablaze from stem to stern.

Lieutenant Polkinghorn ordered demolition charges to be placed at vital points and then fired them. By this time every man on board had either been killed or wounded, and as the Peterel began to sink the commanding officer gave the order to abandon ship. The survivors in the water. Chinese sampans eventually rescued the few survivors. Lieutenant Polkinghorn was so severely wounded himself he could not be lifted on board but had to be towed ashore.

Comdr. J. B. Wooley, RN, who was the senior naval officer in Shanghai at the time, reports that the Peterel's fight made a tremendous impression on the Japanese. When they took Lieutenant Polkinghorn prisoner, they asked him why he did not surrender in view of the impossible odds. "Officers of the British navy do not surrender their ships," he replied.

Lieutenant Polkinghorn, just released from a prison camp, has been awarded the British Distinguished Service Cross.

He unlocked a great future for women—with 37 keys

A MAN named Sholes invented the first practical typewriter. "I feel," said Sholes, "that I have done something for the women who have always had to work so hard. This will enable them more easily to earn a living." Mr. Sholes was a great prophet.

Christopher Latham Sholes, a Milwaukee printer and editor, and an attorney friend, Carlos Glidden, had been working on a machine to number serially the pages of books. As they developed their numbering machine, they added letters—and there was a writing machine.

In the fall of 1867, they decided they finally had something, and staged a demonstration. Before a group including a Milwaukee newspaper reporter, Sholes sat down at the piano-like keyboard of "The Type-Writer" and punched out on the 37 keys (all capitals) this bit of history: "C. Latham Sholes, September, 1867." Those five words became an emancipation proclamation for women.

Not immediately, though. Even if "The Type-Writer" admittedly was "an ornament to an office, study, or sitting-room," would "write more than twice as fast as the pen," and "made no litter," (as its 1875 advertising said) people were skeptical. Skepticism wasn't converted into sales until the sewing machine division of E. Remington & Sons, of Ilion, New York, "makers of firearms, sewing machines, and farm implements," took over the manufacture of "The Type-Writer" and began to advertise its specific advantages to lawyers, editors, authors, and court reporters.

More and more Remington typewriter advertising kept appearing, and many an up-and-coming business establishment began to buy and to boast of its flower-decorated Model 1 Remington, fitted to a sewing machine standard, with a "stenographer" in a shirt waist busily stepping on the foot treadle that operated the carriage return.

The national brand advertising of the leading typewriter makers, from those days to these, has been a social force for great good. It has helped to father a commercial revolution that changed the whole financial outlook for women. It has helped increase family incomes. It has helped give business the speed we need.

All brand advertising always serves us.

Brand advertising saves for us, too. Without the mass demand for good radios created by brand advertising, good radios wouldn't have been mass-produced, and couldn't have been sold for $9.95 in 1941, after averaging $167.50 in 1928. Refrigerators couldn't have dropped their prices $180 in 14 years. Oil burners might still have cost $625, instead of averaging $299 after only 16 years of brand advertising.

Every business brims with examples of how brand advertising serves you and saves you. Count up your benefits from it sometime—on a large—very large—sheet of paper.

It happened to JOHNSON & JOHNSON

35¢ in 1917 but 10¢ in 1945

The price of nationally advertised Red Cross Adhesive Plaster dropped 71% from World War I to this war. It took the mass demand and confidence in quality which J & J's advertising built up to make necessary the mass production that inevitably means lower prices on all kinds of products.

Strike Closes Kelly Plant, May Spread

Cumberland, Md., Nov. 1 (AP).—Ralph C. Baird, president of Local 26, United Rubber Workers of America, expressed the possibility today that the strike at the Kelly-Springfield Tire Co. plant here may spread to all plants and subsidiaries of the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co.

The strike here began late yesterday, and today the plant was closed 100 per cent for the first time in its history.

Baird said he expected to notify the other 12 locals in the Goodyear system of the strike here. He said it will not be necessary to ask them to come out.

Employs 2000

"Some locals are aware of the situation here and have made preparations," Baird said. He said he does not expect any action by other locals unless the shutdown here lasts several weeks. He estimated 40,000 to 50,000 workers are employed in the Goodyear chain. The Kelly plant employs about 2000.

The complete shutdown of the plant resulted when maintenance men who remained on the job last night failed to report today. Employes of the power house reported this morning, but on learning that some supervisory employes were engaged in some production work, they left the plant, union leaders said.

"There is no doubt about the strike being legal," Harry E. Castle, union vice president, said. "It will be technically made so at a membership meeting Sunday afternoon."

Seek Ohio Wages

The walkout yesterday came after officials of the union and company failed to make any progress toward an understanding on wage demands asked by the workers. The negotiations had been carried on for several weeks. The union is asking wages equal to those paid rubber workers in Akron, Ohio. The company contends it cannot grant a general wage increase without a price increase, but a spokesman said today they would meet any industrial wage program adopted.

Meanwhile, a committee to prepare a proposed contract for office workers at the Kelly plant was appointed by Local 162, Office Employes International Union (AFL), C. E. Stutzman, Allegany Trades Council organizer, said today.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 1 (AP).—Economy regulations of the milk industry required during the war by the Federal Government will be continued in Norfolk, Portsmouth, Newport News, Williamsburg, Petersburg, Hopewell and Martinsville. A representative of the State Milk Commission has announced.

The measures put into effect during the war to conserve trucking equipment and thereby maintain prices of milk to the consumer at the lowest possible level must remain in effect if OPA ceiling prices are to be maintained, the representative said.

Increased costs of distribution have been offset to some extent by the conservation measures, which include delivery of milk every other day instead of daily and the bottling of milk for home consumption in containers not less than one quart in size.

The decision of the milk commission goes into effect tomorrow when ODT regulations are discontinued.

It was stated that at hearings held during the last 30 days in all the cities affected, with the exception of Martinsville where the regulations of the milk commission are already in effect no objections were raised by consumers, producers, or distributors except for one plant.

Pastor Acquitted In Auto Fatality

Richmond, Va., Nov. 1 (AP).—The Rev. L. E. Holzbach, 48, Baptist minister of Ivor, in Prince George County, today was acquitted of an involuntary manslaughter charge heard in Chesterfield County Trial Justice Court.

The minister was the driver of an automobile which struck Willie E. Hutson, 50, of Richmond, near Swift Creek on Petersburg Pike last Friday night, resulting in his almost immediate death.

The Rev. Mr. Holzbach notified police of the accident as soon as it happened, stating he did not see the Richmonder until he stepped in front of the defendant's car.

Baltimore to Replace Trolleys With Buses

Baltimore, Nov. 1 (AP).—The Baltimore Transit Co. announced plans today to replace streetcars with buses on lines serving many parts of the city, at a cost of approximately $7,500,000.

Meanwhile, a subcommittee of the commission on city plan recommended construction of multiple-deck downtown parking garages to accommodate some 5000 automobiles in an effort to preserve downtown real estate values. The cost of the parking garages was estimated at about $8,500,000.

The Transit Co. said that instead of the present 27 streetcar routes, the new program called for only 11.

Md. Librarian Delays Resignation to Dec. 1

Baltimore, Nov. 1 (AP).—State School Superintendent Thomas G. Pullen, jr., announced today that Miss Adelene J. Pratt, State director of public libraries whose resignation was to have become effective October 31, will continue in office until December 1, when it is hoped a successor will be available.

Grange Urges Free Commerce Between States

Richmond, Va., Nov. 1 (AP).—Adoption of a resolution urging renewal of Virginia's reciprocity agreements with other States puts the Virginia State Grange on record as "absolutely against any trade barrier," says W. T. Moreland, chairman of the grange's highways and transportation committee.

The resolution seeking restoration of the agreements, whereby the State's 2 per cent gross receipts tax on out-of-State carriers was waived during the war, was introduced by Moreland and unanimously adopted yesterday at the closing session of the grange's annual meeting.

Administrative and legislative branches of the Commonwealth were urged in the resolution "to lend every aid and cooperation to the development of full and complete reciprocity agreements with other States, to the end that free and unhampered commerce between said States can be developed to its fullest extent and trade barriers prevented."

The grange also adopted resolutions supporting legislation requiring vitamin and mineral enrichment of all flour sold in Virginia, and asking for better veterinary diagnostic facilities and livestock research. Another proposal favorably acted upon by the grange was one favoring "development of water power facilities on the James River to the fullest possible extent."

Wife Convicted Of Slaying Miner, Faces 1-Year Term

Winfield, W. Va., Nov. 1 (AP).—A Putnam County jury returned a verdict of involuntary manslaughter late today against Mrs. Elizabeth Amos, 34, in the shotgun slaying of her coal mine foreman husband, Pearl Martin Amos.

Sentence was deferred by Judge John Hereford until 1:30 p. m., tomorrow. The verdict carries a possible penalty of not more than one year in jail and a fine of not more than $500.

The frail, brown-haired defendant received the verdict calmly and with no outward display of emotion.

Mrs. Amos was accused of killing her husband at their mountain farm home near Hurricane last September 6 and burying him in a crude grave with the help of her 11-year-old son.

Beside Mrs. Amos sat her 11-year-old son, Pearl Martin, jr., who had testified that his mother, being unable to get the body into the grave, had cut the legs off below the knees with a hacksaw. Afterward, he said, "I slept good because I knew he wouldn't be knocking me around any more."

4-H Achievement Fete Set Tonight in Leesburg

Leesburg, Va., Nov. 1 (Spl.).—The 4-H Clubs of the county will hold their annual Achievement Night program tomorrow in the Leesburg School Auditorium beginning at 8 p. m.

Peggy Anne Benedum, president of the County Council, will preside. Reports on the year's accomplishments will be given by representatives of the 16 clubs in the county. Accounts of the 4-H Camp held this summer, the 4-H Fair and the Baltimore Livestock Show will be given by club members who participated in these events.

Farmer Builds Own Airfield, Orders Plane

Frederick, Md., Nov. 1 (Spl.).—Austin D. Trout, 27-year-old farmer of near this city, is not waiting for Frederick to construct its million-dollar airport before he starts flying.

The progressive young farmer has already purchased an Aeronca Chief two-place cabin plane which he expects to receive shortly after first of the year. In the meantime he has started to lay out his own airport on his 140-acre farm, which will eventually be in the Frederick corporate limits under present expansion plans of municipal officials.

Trout said today that his landing field will consist of a runway 1500 feet long and 200 feet wide. It is to be constructed on level terrain and will need practically no grading or draining. He hopes to eventually erect a hangar when building materials are released.

Trout developed his enthusiasm for flying through building gasoline-powered model planes while going to school. Later he took courses of instruction and now holds a private pilot's license. His wife is also an aviation enthusiast, but said that she does not intend to try for a pilot's permit, but will travel as a passenger.

Trial Postponed For 4 in Snake Bite Death Case

Norton, Va., Nov. 1 (AP).—The trial of the Rev. Harvey Kirk of Ramsey and Paul Dotson, Leander Ely and John Wilson, all of Lee County, and all charged with murder in the death of Mrs. Anna Kirk, wife of one of the defendants, has been continued to the next term of Circuit Court, which opens January 21.

Immediately after their indictment, their trial was set for Monday, November 5, but Vernon B. Tate, attorney for the Rev. Mr. Kirk, told the court several of the witnesses he planned to bring to the stand were ill—one in Baltimore, and the others in Lee County—and it would be impossible for them to appear in court next week.

The four men were indicted by the October grand jury following the death of Mrs. Kirk on September 3, two days after she had been bitten by a rattlesnake at a religious service at the church at Ramsey on Saturday night, September 1. Before she died, Mrs. Kirk gave birth to a child that lived only a few minutes.

Epes Retrial Hearing Delayed

Columbia, S. C., Nov. 1 (AP).—Hearing on the retrial motion of Samuel C. Epes of Richmond, Va., convicted September 22 of murder in the death of his wife, today was postponed until December 14.

Epes, 27, was sentenced to life imprisonment when he was recommended for mercy by the jury that found him guilty on charges of giving his wife an overdose of a pain-relieving barbiturate last January and burying her in an abandoned foxhole.

The 27-year-old scion of a wealthy Virginia family immediately moved for a new trial. The motion was set for hearing tomorrow by Trial Judge Arthur Lee Gaston.

Defense Attorney Edgar A. Brown said delay in the hearing was caused by time needed to complete a transcript of the trial evidence.

Draft Officials Weigh Refusal Of 'COs' to Work 79-Hr. Week

Richmond, Va., Nov. 1 (AP).—Two representatives of United States Selective Service have left Eastern State Hospital to return to Washington and "talk over" refusal of conscientious objectors to work a 79-hour week as ward attendants in the mental hospital, Superintendent J. E. Barrett said this morning.

Dr. Barrett spent most of yesterday in conference with A. S. Imrie, executive officer of Selective Service's camp operations division, and Col. Simon P. Dunkle of the legal division, but the conference produced no decision or plans "I can pass on," the superintendent said this morning.

The protesting objectors today "reiterated their desire to offer adequate care for the patients" and made a statement condemning "such labor conditions" as "not in the best interest of the patients or hospital."

Dr. Wirt A. Warren, also a conscientious objector assigned to the hospital and serving as assistant physician (but not a member of the Quaker-sponsored unit of objectors who serve as ward attendants), issued a statement, too, in which he deplored working conditions at the hospital for civilian employes as objectors.

Eight of nine conscientious objectors assigned to 79-hour-a-week night schedule in the wards, refused to accept such a schedule, and others on a day shift declared they would not work 79 hours if ordered to. The new 79-hour schedule calls for 7 hours of night work, in addition to the former 72 hours a week for six days.

Spokesman Richard Taylor for the objectors declared that nearly all of the 58 men in a unit sponsored by the Quaker American Friends Society Committee have said they will not work 79 hours, night or day, if so assigned. The objectors, assigned to hospital service by Selective Service, are paid $15 a month by the Friends Society Committee in Philadelphia.

Fenwick Decision Hit

Marion, Va., Nov. 1 (AP).—Sharp criticism of Judge Julien Gunn's decision in Richmond Circuit Court in the Wise County election fraud case was injected into a political gathering here last night by Representative John W. Flannagan, jr., of the Ninth District.

Speaking in the home town of L. Preston Collins, who won the contest over Charles R. Fenwick of Arlington, Flannagan said: "That decision was rendered by a judge 350 miles from the scene of the alleged fraud. I respect the judge, but I thank God I do not have to agree with the decision. . . ." He charged that "the judge read too many newspapers and too few statutes."

Pledges Rural Aid

Rural Retreat, Va., Nov. 1 (AP).—Senator S. Floyd Landreth, Republican candidate for Governor, told a Wythe County mass meeting here last night that the Republican Party's objectives called for immediate improvement for rural areas in the matter of teachers for the schools.

He asserted that the Democratic leadership had made a great gesture in setting up the Denny commission to recommend education improvements, but that the report was sidetracked and Virginia remained forty-second among the Nation's schools.

Darden Aids Campaign

Marion, Va., Nov. 1 (AP).—A first-class public school system and a "system of public health that embraces every political subdivision" are highly important to Virginia, Governor Darden said in an address before an overflowing audience at the Smyth County courthouse last night.

A sound system of public instruction can be made the "engine of a great progress within the Commonwealth," declared the Governor in his first speech in the Ninth District on his present tour of the State in behalf of the Democratic candidates for State office.

Carville in New Blast

Galax, Va., Nov. 1 (AP).—Howard Carwile, independent candidate for Governor, today lambasted both Republican and Democratic Party leaders with the charge that "there is a diabolical conspiracy to steal my vote in the November election," and vowed that he would "challenge the entire election" if the plan is carried out.

Candidate Carwile spoke to an audience of about 250 workers of the Galax Knitting Mills while they ate lunch at their machines here in Republican Candidate S. Floyd Landreth's home town.

"It will work like this," said Carwile. "Those people voting for me, but voting for the Republican candidate for lieutenant governor and attorney general will be counted for Mr. Landreth. Those people voting for me, but voting for the Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor and attorney general, will be counted for Mr. Tuck (Democratic candidate for Governor. . . ."

More Taxicab Permits Asked in Baltimore

Baltimore, Nov. 1 (AP).—The nucleus of a new organization dedicated to seeking 150 additional taxicab permits with top priority to veterans was announced in Baltimore today.

Chairman Morris P. Berke reported after the organization meeting that about 40 veterans, three fourths of whom now drive cabs for other companies but who want to operate their own vehicles, attended the first session.

They are basing their request for new authorizations by the Public Service Commission, Berke said, on the population increase since the 1000-cab limit was set for Baltimore several years ago.

County Seeks Exemption On New Auto Tag Law

Frederick, Md., Nov. 1 (AP).—Frederick County commissioners will join a movement to gain exemption from a new law which requires counties to issue motor vehicle licenses or pay the State a fee.

Under a 1945 act, the motor vehicle commissioner collects county automobile licenses and remits proceeds to the counties—which do not issue plates at the local treasurer's office.

The commissioner deducts a fee for this service.

Calvert Hospital to Get Memorial Equipment

Prince Frederick, Md., Nov. 1 (AP).—A new anesthetizing device will be presented to the Calvert County Hospital as a memorial to its late superintendent, Dr. Everard Briscoe, at dedicatory ceremonies at the institution November 18, it was announced today.

The memorial was sponsored by the Lions Club of Calvert County. Guest speaker at the ceremonies will be Dr. Walter Wise, Baltimore surgeon and friend of Dr. Briscoe.

Sharp Increase In Cooperative Sales Forecast

W. G. Wysor of Richmond, Va., manager of the Southern States Cooperative, said today that the organization expected to increase its marketing program approximately five million dollars during the current fiscal year.

Wysor, speaking at the opening session of the Southern States twenty-second annual meeting in Baltimore (Lord Baltimore Hotel) told approximately 600 farmer-delegates that the corporation did $2,500,000 of marketing during the fiscal year ended June 30 and it intended to market approximately $7,500,000 worth of products this fiscal year.

He reported that the cooperative net savings for the fiscal year was $1,312,241.63. Total amount of business handled by Southern States was $57,107,770, compared with $51,850,767 taken care of the previous fiscal year, he said.

In discussing the cooperatives' proposed expansion program, the manager said that the board of directors had authorized the expenditure of a little over six million dollars on fixed assets during the next two years.

Of this amount, he said, two million dollars has been allocated for a new and modern feed mill in Baltimore, which will have twice the capacity of the present Baltimore plant.

Death Coma Steals Joy of Veteran's Family Reunion

Waynesboro, Va., Nov. 1 (AP).—Pfc. William L. Galford, 26, who recently returned from the Pacific, died in Woodrow Wilson General Hospital here today without ever recognizing at his bedside his wife and parents whom he had not seen for more than two years.

Private Galford of Cumberland, Md., came back to the United States after almost two years in the Pacific and had been at the Woodrow Wilson Hospital for less than a week when he was struck by an automobile last Tuesday.

Brought back to Woodrow Wilson unconscious, he remained in that condition, never realizing that his wife, Mrs. Evelyn Galford, and his parents, whom he had hoped to see on a furlough which had been set for today, were by his side.

Stronger Farm Organizations Urged by Page

Fredericksburg, Va., Nov. 1 (Spl.).—Stronger farm organizations to provide better incomes and higher standards of living for the 20 per cent of the population which produces from the land the food which the Nation eats was advocated by Rosewell Page, of the State Department of Agriculture, in an address before the annual meeting of the Spotsylvania County Farm Bureau last night.

Mr. Page, administrative assistant to Agricultural Commissioner L. M. Walker, jr., declared that only by such organization could the farm people "make their voices heard in the legislative halls."

He said that in order to keep farm production from going lower youth must be encouraged to remain on the farm, and that this could be done only by giving a standard of living comparable with other pursuits.

The bureau reported a current membership of 185.

Leaf Outlook Is Described As Favorable

By the Associated Press

The Agriculture Department yesterday described the 1946-47 tobacco outlook as favorable.

This forecast is based on the probable high level of domestic consumption of tobacco products, particularly cigarettes, and large exports.

Stocks of tobacco in the United Kingdom and other importing countries are so low that several years of above-average imports will be required to rebuild them to prewar size, the department said in its publication, "The Tobacco Situation."

Dollar exchange may be a major problem in most countries during the next few years, but tobacco is such an important source of revenue to most foreign governments that arrangements likely will be made for its purchase.

About one third of the total domestic tobacco production, including one half of the flue-cured crop, is shipped abroad in normal times. Consequently, the level of exports in the next five years will be an important factor in prices paid growers, especially for flue-cured and dark tobacco.

"Although the price outlook for tobacco during 1946-47 is generally favorable to growers," the department said, "some declines below present price levels may be in prospect. The situation, however, differs among types.

"Prices this year and last reached peak levels, and under ceiling regulations prices for poor grades of flue-cured, Maryland and some types of cigar tobacco have been almost as high as for the better grades of leaf. In the absence of ceilings the price spread between high and low grades likely will be much wider than during the past two or three years."

SECOND OF A SERIES DEALING WITH WHAT'S AHEAD IN TRAIN TRAVEL

in Restoring Train Service
TO NORMAL

Although the pace of demobilizing millions of men and women in the Army and Navy quickens . . . Railroads are doing many things to better travel

Of course, practically everybody realizes the railroads' war job is only half done.

The millions of men and women they took away must be brought back.

So a large number of our coaches—and an even greater percentage of Pullmans—will be tied up exclusively in the great movement of demobilization.

But as rapidly as the need for railroad equipment for this purpose tapers off . . .

The Pennsylvania Railroad will . . .

(1) Put back trains and cars that have been taken off . . .

(2) Add more dining cars to trains . . .

(3) Improve schedules . . .

(4) Restore "on time" train dependability . . .

(5) More readily accommodate those seeking Pullman and Coach reservations . . .

Placed orders and designs for the most advanced modern coaches . . .

Moving ahead as rapidly as possible to . . . better train service.

The National Football League next year will probably give the heave-ho to a rule adopted two seasons ago which has proved nothing but irksome to the customers. It's the free-substitution rule which permits coaches to send players in and out of the game as they like, and has made a ridiculous hodge-podge of their game.

POVICH

"The rule was jammed through by the Redskins, Bears and Eagles who had specialists like Baugh, Luckman and Zimmerman and wanted to protect them," declares one coach in the league. "We're going to outvote them at the next meeting and go back to the rule that prevented a player who has been withdrawn from returning to the lineup more than once in any quarter."

As the game now is played, the customer is rarely certain who's playing. Men move out of the line-up and substitutes move in without restriction. The fans are compelled to spend more time looking at their scorecard numbers than at the ball game, if they want to keep up with the personnel. The same lineups are rarely in action on three consecutive plays, and substitutions are carried to confusing extremes.

No longer is it team vs. team, but squad vs. squad. At times, in the recent game at Pittsburgh, the Redskins had four ends in their line-up, to cover kick-offs. They have also played on defense this year with four tackles and no guards. The teams have lost their identity as teams, due to the unlimited shuttling and shuffling, both in the backfield and in the line.

The Redskins owed their first popularity in Washington to the fans' admiration for the 1937-38-39 teams in a period when they were always sure who the players were. Big No. 17 was Turk Edwards. The ubiquitous No. 26 was Vic Carroll and "19" was always associated with tall Charley Malone. The customers always knew who was playing each position. Today it's a guessing game. The turnover is so rapid, it can't be followed with any accuracy.

Pro football has become a game of the coaches, who send in "defensive" players and jerk out "offensive" men when their teams lose the ball. There are players who are reserved only for the kickoff and punt returns. The 60-minute player is extinct, apparently. The paradox is that the caliber of football hasn't improved at all.

In most of the early season games, Redskin fans saw Bill DeCorrevant and Steve Bagarus on the field only when the opposing club was kicking off or punting. Then they were jerked. On occasion they went in for one such play, and didn't even handle the ball, and left the game before another play started. That has to be called high nonsense. As a result of all the substitutions, you don't see a team weaken or improve, because it isn't the same team for more than five minutes at a time.

Out at Detroit, the Lions are taking advantage of the rule to use Andy Farkas only for kick returns. And the Chicago Bears get Sid Luckman out of there quickly when they don't have the ball. The most palpable case of panicky substitution, though, is that of the Eagles. Greasy Neale doesn't dare leave Quarterback Roy Zimmerman in the ball game when the Eagles don't have the ball because Zimmerman can't tackle.

Teams like Boston, Pittsburgh, Green Bay and the Chicago Cardinals and Cleveland are opposed to the rule and they think they have enough votes to kill free substitutions. Brooklyn, under Ray Flaherty, will also have a vote and he never liked the idea of unlimited substitutes. The pity is, however, that the customers don't have a vote. They'd not only kill the rule but they'd vote one club owner in particular right out of the league.

It's apparent now that the team the Redskins will have to beat out for the Eastern Division title is the Eagles. A case can be built up for the Eagles as the strongest contenders despite the fact they were licked by the Redskins while the Boston Yanks defeated the Redskins. The Yankees get a brutal break in the schedule. They have to play Green Bay twice this year, while neither the Redskins nor the Eagles play Green Bay even once. It's inequitable scheduling.

The Redskins are an improving ball team, but right now they are not to be classed with any of the good Redskin teams of former years. When the Redskins beat the Giants, 24-14, it was satisfactory but very misleading. The Giant team, Coach Steve Owen says so himself, is the worst Giant team in history and we'll go farther than that and say it's the worst pro league team in history. The Redskins didn't beat much, by only 10 points.

Mad Russian Returns

Phillies Get Novikoff, Demaree In Draft; Nats Acquire Wilson

Chicago, Nov. 1 (AP).—Lowie (the Mad Russian) Novikoff is coming back to the major leagues.

Novikoff, now in the Army but the property of the Los Angeles club of the Pacific Coast League, was drafted today by the Philadelphia Phillies at the opening of the annual player draft meeting. Novikoff, formery an outfielder with the Chicago Cubs, and also with Milwaukee, was obtained for the top draft price of $7500.

Novikoff

The Philadelphia Athletics with first choice in the draft, selected Outfielder Frank Demaree from the Portland club of the Pacific Coast League, also for $7500. Demaree also is a former Cub and member of the New York Giants.

Only nine players were selected in the proceedings that lasted exactly 28 minutes.

A's Take Handley

The Chicago White Sox picked Alton Biggs, a second baseman from the Milwaukee club of the American Association and also Pete Thomassie, an outfielder with the Memphis, Tenn., club of the Southern Association.

The Philadelphia Athletics also made a second choice in obtaining Gene Handley, infielder of the Sacramento club of the Pacific Coast League.

The Boston Braves obtained Earle Reid, a pitcher from Indianapolis of the American Association. Reid, however, still is in military service.

The Pittsburgh Pirates selected Ben Guintini, a San Francisco outfielder, while the Washington Nats chose Max Wilson, a pitcher from Portsmouth of the Piedmont League.

The New ork Giants completed the draft by selecting Pitcher Mike Budnick of the Seattle club of the Pacific Coast League.

Some Clubs Missing

Disdaining the draft list were nine clubs—the Chicago Cubs, the Detroit Tigers, the St. Louis Cardinals, the Brooklyn Dodgers, the St. Louis Browns, the New York Yankees, the Cleveland Indians, the Cincinnati Reds and the Boston Red Sox. The Red Sox, Indians ankees and Dodgers were not represented.

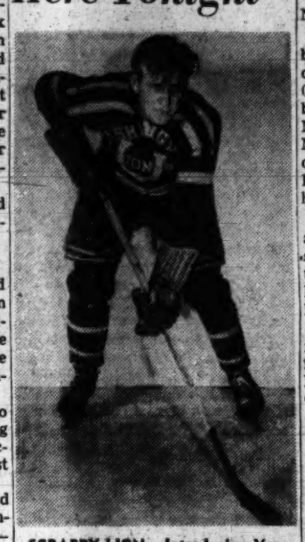
Commissioner Chandler announced he would meet Friday with baseball's promotion committee, but said he had no immediate plans for making a promotional director for a proposed $50,000 program to stimulate baseball interest.

Wilson Recommended By Sherrard Robertson

Max Wilson, left-handed pitcher of the Portsmouth, (Va.), Club claimed by the Nats for the $4000 Piendmont League draft price, is now in the Navy but expects his discharge before the end of the year.

Wilson, chunky and tow-headed, was recommended to Clark Griffith by Sherrard Robertson, former Washington third baseman, who played with Wilson on Navy teams. Pitching for Bainbridge a year ago, Wilson shut the Nats out for seven innings, and he beat the Army All-Stars in the service world series at Honolulu.

Hockey Lions Open Season Here Tonight



SCRAPPY LION—Introducing Vern Kaiser, 20-year-old defenseman of the Washington Lions, who makes his Uline Arena debut tonight against the Philadelphia Falcons. Kaiser served with the Canadian armed forces in the recent war, and is a personal protege of Eddie Shore, talent scout of the Lions and one of hockey's all-time greats.

Washingtons' reorganized Lions will introduce all new faces at Uline Arena tonight when they open their Eastern Hockey League campaign against Herb Gardiner's Philadelphia Falcons at 8:30 o'clock.

Not one of the players on last year's squad remains with the Lions. Mart Prophet, 22-year-old goal tender for the Winnipeg Royal Canadian Air Force Bombers, will be in the nets for Washington, and will be protected by husky Defensemen Harold Harsley, Dan Linton, Vern Kaiser and Joe Fennell.

Fred Petsura and Tom Kennedy are the Lions' centers, while Wingmen Wyn Cook, Bill Glennie, Victor Chad, Pete Hauck, Gaston Adams and Dave Livingston round out the squad.

The Lions are youthful, fast and agrressive and should go far under Coach Maxie Bennett, a smart winger for some years with the Syracuse, Buffalo and Pittsburgh American Hockey League teams.

Gardiner, formerly of Les Canadiens, also is making his debut locally as coach of the Falcons tonight. Prominent among his players are three former Lions: Winger and Center George Kelly, Jimmy Wilson, veteran center, and Edgar "Chirp" Brenchley, winger.

Winger Joe Ciuman, a bugaboo of last year's Lions, holds over with the Phils who have added two colorful players in roly-poly Center Hank D'Amore and Winger Vern O'Donnell, last season with the New York Rovers.

Some doubt as to whether Brenchley will represent the Falcons tonight was entertained yesterday following a protest lodged with Eastern League President Tom Lockhart by Bennett regarding the player's eligibility.

Eagan Orders Louis-Conn Bout for N.Y.

By Sid Feder

New York, Nov. 1 (AP).—Much to Mike Jacobs' "surprise," State Athletic Commission Chairman Eddie Eagan was quoted in a copyright story in Ring Magazine as threatening to revoke Mike's fight promoting license if he takes next June's Joe Louis-Billy Conn bout out of New York.

After reading the story, written by Nat Fleischer, long-time editor of Ring, Mike couldn't figure out (a) just how Eagan could go about barring his punch productions in Madison Square Garden and St. Nicholas Arena for merely moving one of his fights to some other village, and (b) why Eagan didn't tell him personally.

"I'm very much suprised at Eagan," he said. "Sure, the commissioner has spoken to me several times about how much he'd like to have the fight in New York, but he's never threatened me."

Eagan himselff could not be reached for verification or expansion of the statement. Nor were Eagan's associate commissioners, Gen. John J. Phelan and A. B. Powell, jr., at the commission offices. A secretary there said: "Eagan is out of townup-State—and we can't tell you where."

Story Approved

However, Fleischer said he had obtained the statement from Eagan, and, after writing the story, had shown a copy to the commission, which approved it.

"We will fight hard to keep the fight here," Flesicher quoted Eagan as saying, "and if compelled to do it, then we shall inform Mike Jacobs that New York's commission has the power to issue licenses and also to revoke them, and such an act as taking the fight to Philadelphia will bring about such action.

"If Jacobs takes the Conn-Louis battle away to Philadelphia, the commission will see fit to ask him to do all of his promoting in Quakertown."

"Governor Dewey and the State legislators wouldn't be very pleased to have the fight taken from us. The State tax belongs to New York and the business that is brought to a city by such fights should go to this area."

For weeks, Mike has said the fight, which he expects to gross three million dollars, would go to the city "where we can make the most money." Although those who are supposed to be in the know in these parts insist it will be held here in Yankee Stadium, Mike also has mentioned that Chicago, Philadelphia and Detroit are in the bidding, among other places.

Another Bid Received

Today, a representative of the Indiana State Boxing Commission turned up at Jacobs' office and put in a bid to hold the red-hot return go in Indianapolis on the eve of the renewal of the 500-mile Decoration Day automobile race there next spring. If iMke should take the fight away from Pa Knickerbocker's village, one of the main reasons would be the 5 per cent State tax on fistic motion pictures.

"After all," Mike pointed out, "I've taken shows—among them some of Joe Louis'—out of town before. And suppose he does take my license away. They'd only have to get another promoter for the Garden.

"I haven't said the fight wouldn't be in New York. You know, according to the contracts, Ihave until 40 days before the date to let the fighters know where it will be held. That means, I don't have to tip anybody off until April or May."

Eagan, in the ring story, pointed out that the business "by products" of a production such as the Louis-Conn get together would "amount to 10 million dollars."

"That's something the commission won't overlook in pressing the issue," Fleischer quoted him.

Who Says Morale Is Down?

Tony Minisi, former University of Pennsylvania back who scored the winning touchdown last Saturday as Navy whipped the Quakers, 14-7, in the last 25 seconds, goes high for a pass in practice as Quarterback Bob Hoernschemeyer waits around just to make sure. Middies morale isn't low, Academy officials say, especially with undefeated Notre Dame coming up this weekend at Cleveland. Neither is Minisi.

Navy Coach Praises Team's Morale; Hopes to Beat Irish

Annapolis, Nov. 1 (AP).—Discontent which experts say has affected Navy's football playing was believed dissipated today as a team rejuvenated in spirit entrained for Cleveland and Saturday's setto with the undefeated Irish of Notre Dame.

Head Coach Oscar Hagberg was quoted that he wouldn't be back at Navy next year. But he was optimistic about the outcome of the next game on Navy's list which the Middies hope will extend its season's victory streak.

"After the Penn game," declared Hagberg when asked to comment on reported criticism of dissension on the Navy team, "our morale is high, and it gets higher as the Notre Dame battle approaches."

Capt. C. O. Humphreys, Navy director of athletics, previously had confirmed widespread reports of low morale and discontent among Navy gridders.

"We have known there has been something wrong," he said, "and we have been trying to put a finger on it."

Concerning reports which credited Capt. Dick Duden, Navy end, with improvising plays in the last-minute rally that gave the Middies a 14-7 victory over Penn last week, Commander Hagberg said that Duden did not call signals, but he did advise Quarterback Bob Hoernschemeyer to turn to a passing attack midway of the fourth quarter.

The Navy coach said his regular team would be ready to start against Notre Dame except for Newbold Smti hat left tackle in place of Charlie Kiser, and George Sundheim at fullback substituting for Bob Jenkins.

Jenkins To Play

Both Kiser and Jenkins, sidelined because of injuries, will make the trip to Cleveland, however, and are expected to see action.

Jenkins has been out of action on account of leg injuries, but again is in good shape.

Jenkins, a former Alabama star and All-America fullback on the Associated Press' second team last year, is an even bet to get into the Notre Dame game.

Hagberg told newsmen that it is the prerogative of the captain, as was the case with Duden last Saturday, to advise the quarterback on kicking and passing.

He added that regular Navy plays with numbers were used in the Duden-Hoernschemeyer combination.

Scalpers 'Cashing In' On Irish-Navy Tickets

Cleveland, oNv. 1 (AP).—Despite a recently passed city ordinance scalpers were asking—and getting—$12.50 to $25 each today for $3.75 tickets for the game between unbeaten Notre Dame and Navy in Cleveland Stadium Saturday.

Game officials said Notre Dame alone turned back 168,000 requests for seats and the Cleveland Chamber of Commerce has refunded $30,000 to members alone—the refunds representing checks that had been sent in for tickets.

The Stadium's 80,000 capacity has been sold out for many weeks.

Rich. Open Today Draws Top Golf Pros

Richmond, Va., Nov. 1 (AP).—With top-flight golfers from all over the country included in the entry list, the three-day Richmond $10,000 Invitational Open Golf Tournament wilul open here tomorrow.

The entry list, studded with such pro leaders as Sammy Snead, Ben Hogan, Jimmy Hines, Joe Kirkwood, Gene Sarazen, Vic Ghezzi and a host of others of equal, or near caliber, is expected to be in excess of 150 by the time the tournament starts.

Most of the top notchers have been here for several days, and late arrivals already have had a practice shot at the course, a golfing layout on which accuracy and second-shot skill pay off on a two-to-one ratio.

Under the revised course for the $10,000 Invitational Open, which requires playing the last nine first, these half a dozen holes are Nos. 1, 2, 8, 10, 14 and 18. Another factor that will reward accuracy is the large number of out-of-bounds penalties. No less than 10 holes are out of bounds to the right, and some of them, in addition, are out of bounds to the rear. Ten holes also are "blinnd"—that is the golfer on the tee cannot see the green.

Camp Lee Golfers In Richmond Open

Camp Lee, Va., Nov. 1 (AP).—Two Camp Lee golfers will match strokes with the country's top link stars in the Richmond $10,000 invitation open golf tournament, which starts tomorrow at the Hermitage Country Club.

Lieut. Frank Michny, of the ASFTC and Lieut. Sam Dom, of the Quartermaster School, are the two leemen who will represent the Petersburg Country Club. Both hail from New York State.

Lieutenant Michny won the spring title at Petersburg, and recently shot a brilliant 63 round to break the club course, which had stood several years. Lieutenant Dom went to the finals of the fall tourney before being eliminated.

Both officers are entered in the amateur division.

Sophocles, Choice, Last In Feature

By Walter Haight
Post Staff Writer.

Pimlico, Md., Nov. 1.—Favorite players took a sound beating at this track today as long shots dominated the card. The upsets extended into the day's feature race, the Ashburton, when J. P. Holton's Jo Agnes stuck to her running guns long enough to win by a length and to give her backers a $12.40 mutuel. Deering Howe's Cassis was second, a length and a half in front of Sandy Lane Farm's Elmo T, in a field of six going 6 furlongs.

A crowd of 14,000 saw Jo Agnes go to the front at the break with H. H. Hecht's Sophocles last, a position this favorite maintained with vigor to the end. Jo Agnes, a filly who has been stopping with the greatest of ease hereabouts, forgot the breaks today and Cassis chased her all the way, Elmo T rallied mildly to be third.

The winner was clocked in a creditable 1:11 4-5 over the fast track.

Adroit Pays $6.30

The shortest price of the day came in the seventh race, when Mrs. R. H. Heighe's Adroit, at $6.30, led the favorite, W. P. Wetherall's Lord Calvert, to the wire in a test of 1 mile and a furlong. Under Jockey Ken Scawthorn's handling Adroit was never headed. Third in the field of six was S. D. McGill's Right Happy.

The program began mild enough with a victory by L. O. Payne's Shove Off at a $17 mutuel. Apprentice W. Cherry booted this 3-year-old home. In the second, Mrs. C. Bowers' Twink Shot got up in the final strides to win at an individual mutuel of $66.40. Those who bet on the daily double combination of "3 and 4" received a $263.30 mutuel on the win bet.

In the third race, W. P. Chrysler's Galaxy did the surprising and came home under Apprpentice B. Vandergriff's handling to reward the scattered backers with a $41 pay-off. Just to show it was "long shot day" Mrs. Heighe had her first winner of the day with Zax, a fleet 3-year-old son of Neddie. Seawthorn also rode this winner and those who backed the short-named, but big-hearted colt collected at the rate of $20.50 to $2.

Another Returns $44

J. H. C. Forbes' Talasea added some more monetary flares to the sport by coming from behind to win the fifth. Again the mutuel board sagged with figured. Talasea paying a healthy $44.

In the eighth race, the crowd installed Danny Galotta's Enterprising as the favorite and then stayed to see that one run out of the money. The winner turned up Mrs. J. L. Moore's Rough News at a substantial $15.80 mutuel. It all added up to a shut out for the favorite players.

Air Transport Test Sunday For Bainbridge

Bainbridge, Md., Nov. 1 (AP).—That 21-game win streak of the Bainbridge Naval Training Center's football team will be in grave danger Sunday when the Commodores take on the star-studded Air Transport Command eleven from Nashville, Tenn.

The Transport Command's ranks are packed with 36 former college and professional performers, including Backs Roger Smith from Texas Tech, Ed Ehlers from Purdue, John Goodyear, Washington Redskins, and Bill McArthur of Santa Barbara (Calif.) College.

The Rockets' line is bolstered by former Penn State End Bob Davis, Preston Flanagan from Texas University, Duquesne's Frank Wydo, George Cheroke of Ohio State and Rafe Nabors, one-time Texas Tech star.

The soldiers are rated as the team to upset Bainbridge's three-year undefeated and untied record. Commodore Coach Paul Pierce announced today that two key regulars, sidelined with injuries for last week's scrap, would be ready for Sunday's all-important grid war. Tackle John Lookabaugh and Halfback Brian Bell should increase the potency of the Commodores all-round play.

Last Sunday Bainbridge defeated Camp Detrick, 40-0, while the Rockets were busy handing the Cherry Point Marines a 27-0 pasting at Washington.

V.M.I. Team Leaves For Tennessee Game at Nashville

Lexington, Va., Nov. 1 (AP).—Headed by Coach Pooley Hubert and a group of Virginia Military Institute officials, the Cadet football team, 27 strong, left here at noon today for Nashville, Tenn., where Saturday the Fighting Squadron opposes the Vanderbilt Commodores.

De Meo Talking Contract, Also

Redskins' Line-up Resuming Prewar Status; Aldrich Back

By Al Costello
Post Staff Writer.

More and more, as the season creeps over the halfway mark and into the payoff days, the Redskins are beginning to resemble their prewar selves.

Yesterday a sixth tried and trusted performer came back to the club in the person of Ki Aldrich, 215 pounds of center dynamite who checked in with orders to report today at Bainbridge (Md.) Naval Training Station for discharge. He will return tomorrow in time for practice, and will play against the Chicago Cards here Sunday.

Aldrich, who starred with the championship club of 1942, served with the Navy and is being discharged under the point system. He came to the Redskins in the spring of '41 in a deal with the Cards that sent Halfback Jimmy Johnston and cash to the Chicagoans, after gaining All-America fame at his alma mater, Texas Christian University, from which school haids another important Redskin figure named Sammy Baugh.

Several Others Are Back

Halfback Dick Todd returned to the club earlier in the week; Merlyn Condit, who came to the Redskins from the Brooklyn Dodgers in '43, received his discharge last week and reported in while several weeks ago Cece Hare, Bill DeCorrevont and Steve Bagarus turned up. All except Aldrich are backfield men.

At the same time, another center of All-America proportions, Al DeMeo, who was chosen on many mythical clubs while performing for "Buff" Donelli's powerful 1941 Duquesne eleven and who was drafted by the Redskins in 1942 as third choice, reported last night and will talk contract today.

DeMeo, however, will not be officially signed until next week. As things stand at present, the Redskin roster now includes 33 players, the league limit, including Todd and Aldrich, eligible for play against the Cards. If DeMeo is signed, one of the present group must be placed on the waiver route.

'Skins Title Hopes Soar

Thus the return of Todd and Aldrich gives the Redskins' already soaring title hopes a lift into the stratosphere. In pre-Pearl Harbor days both were among the league's outstanding.

The Cardinals, who held the Redskins to a 7-7 tie in a Buffalo preseason exhibition game, like the Redskins, have improved in many departments, including the quarterback slot, where Paul Christman, former Missouri star and ace passer, holds forth.

Frank Seno and Larry Fuller, two Redskin backs who played against the Cardinals for the Redskins in that September 17 exhibition, are now with the Cards. Seno as a starter, and will face their old Redskin teammates.

Amateur Chase Comes Back To Maryland

Garrison, Md., Nov. 1 (AP).—Amateur steeplechasing will return to Maryland for the first time since 1942 tomorrow when the Blockade Memorial timber race is run over a 3-mile course on the Caves Valley Farm of C. E. Tuttle, near here.

Six horses are expected to start in this event, which Tuttle describes as a "tune-up" for the Maryland Hunt Cup and the Grand National to be resumed next spring after being sidelined during the war.

The expected starters are: Miltiades, owned by Arthur I. Meigs, of Philadelphia; Big Ivan, Joseph O'Farrell of Westminster; Iron Mould, William Ewing, Mount Kisco, N. Y.; Saw Buck, Janon Fisher, jr., Eccleston, Md.; Sentry W. E. Carroll, Washington, and Clifton's Duke, Lawrence Jones, Philadelphia.

There are 16 jumps, three of them over water, in the Blockade Memorial, which was named after the great Timber Topper which is the only horse ever to win three consecutive Maryland Hunt cups. Blockade was killed in 1942 in a fall during a steeplechase at Warrenton, Va.

Handley Judges Play Lee High of Staunton

Winchester, Va., Nov. 1.—Handley High School, undefeated and untied in five games this season, will meet the Robert E. Lee High School of Staunton here tomorrow. The Leemen were defeated last week by Lexington, 19-13, while Handley was running up a 27-0 score against Warren County High School at Front Royal.

The judges are favored to annex their sixth win despite an announcement today that Miller, high scoring halfback, injured last week, would watch the game from the bench. Smith or Powell will fill his place.

Staunton and Winchester have not met on the gridiron since 1928 when the latter club won, 3-0 on a field goal.

Float Me Wins $2500 Newton

Salem, N. H., Nov. 1 (AP).—C. F. Herrmann's Float Me, a 4-5 favorite at the pari mutuels, today won the $2500 Newton allowance purse at Rockingham Park.

J. L. McKnight's Blenweed was second and Irving Gushen's Unknown Reward was third.

The time was 1:46, fastest time of the meeting for 1 1/16 miles. Float Me paid $3.80, $2.80 and $2.60, Blenweed returned $3.80, and $3.20 and Unknown Reward $4.00.

In the secondary feature, Mississauga Stable's Hemfox nipped the early pacemaker, H. L. King's Letter V, at the wire, winning the $2200 Weare Purse in a photo finish. J. Corriera's River Wolf was third.

Hemfox paid $7.80, $4.20 and $3.20. Letter V paid $4.80 and $3.20 and River Wolf $4.40. Time was 1:45 4/5 for the 1 1/16 miles.

The daily double paid $24.80 as S. J. Ball's Passa Grille won the first race and C. Hemstead's Brown Hostess took the second.

Jockey Chris Rogers completed a double in the Weare aboard Hemfox after bringing in Passa Grille in the first.

G.U. Prep's JVs Win

Led by Halfback Carl Bergman, who tallied four touchdowns, Georgetown Prep's "jayvee" eleven defeated St. Albans' juniors, 61-0, yesterday at Garrett Park.

Tulsa Oilers Sign Veteran Mancuso

Tulsa, Okla., Nov. 1 (AP).—Gus Mancuso, veteran major league catcher, was signed today to manage the Tulsa Oilers of the Texas League next season. The league is resumiing afte ra three-year war layoff.

Crayle Howlett, vice president and general manager of the club, said Mancuso was signed for one year, and that he would be carried on the active player list and do some part-time catching. Mancuso had been in the majors 17 years, playing with St. Louis, New York, Chicago, Brooklyn and Philadelphia.

18,727 Hockey Fans Establish League Mark

Chicago, Nov. 1 (AP).—The 18,727 who witnessed the postwar Chicago Blackhawks outskate and outscore the New York Rangers, 5-to-1, in the Chicago Stadium last night was the largest crowd that ever saw a National Hockey League opener in the 29-year history of the league, Mervyn (Red) Dutton, league president, said today. It also was the largest crowd that ever saw a league game on a week night.

Army Game Seats At Penn Sold Out

Philadelphia, Nov. 1 (AP).—The 73,000 Franklin Field seats for the Penn-Army game November 17 have been sold, Athletic Director H. Jamison Swarts announced today.

It marked the second time this year that the capacity of the stadium has been sold out well in advance of a game. The other was for the Penn-Navy game last Saturday. It also was the first time since the stadium was rebuilt in 1926 that it was sold out twice in the same season.

Cage League Forming

Teams planning to enter the D. C. Recreation Basketball League are requested to attend a meeting Monday, 8 p. m., at Garnet-Patterson Community, room 102, 10th and U sts. nw. The following night, a women's meeting will ge held in room 112 also at 8 p. m.

Trio Tied for First In Valley League

Winchester, Va., Nov. 1.—The six high schools in the Valley Athletic League open the second half of their grid schedule tomorrow with three of the teams tied for first place.

Boyce threw the loop into the three-way tie last week by upsetting Berryville, 26-24. The two Clarke County high schools, together with Stonewall, are on top of the heap with four wins and one loss each. Hedgesville is fourth, Strasburg fifth and Stephens City in the cellar.

Games tomorrow pit Stonewall against Boyce, Berryville vs. Strasburg and Hedgesville at Stephens City.

Shepherdstown 6-Man Team in 18-18 Tie

Martinsburg, W. Va., Nov. 1.—The newly organized six-man football team of Shepherdstown (W. Va.) High yesterday held the seasoned Hedgesville (W. Va.) to an 18-18 tie at Hedgesville.

Congress to Probe Scalping of Army-Navy Tickets

An investigation was promised yesterday into allegations by Senator Langer (R., N. D.) that Army-Navy football game tickets are falling into the hands of scalpers while servicemen are unable to purchase them.

Senator Johnson (D., Colo.), Military Affairs Committee chairman, said he would investigate on a resolution offered by Langer.

Langer also asked that the annual service contest be played free of charge and that it be held in a different State each year on an alphabetical basis, starting in Alabama next year.

Langer told a reporter that servicemen from his State had requested him to purchase tickets for them. He hails dhis personal check to Army officials at West Point, dated October 22.

It was returned by Col. Lawrence "Biff" Jones, graduate Manager.

"On the closing date, 4 p. m., 23 October, we were oversubscribed 8000 tickets and presently are engaged in reducing member applications to make up this deficit," Jones wrote Langer.

Langer said that the last time he attended an Army-Navy game, in Philadelphia, "scalpers had signs up selling tickets for $25."

"They now tell me that scalpers have tickets for $25 to $50 to this year's game," Langer said. "I'm going to find out about this situation. There's something screwy somewhere."

Langer added that he is writing Secretary of War Patterson, Secretary of Navy Forrestal and Pennsylvania State authorities about "this affair." This year's Army-Navy game will be played in Philadelphia December 1.

Johnson said that he will 'take the matter up with the Military Committee, probably next week," according to the Associated Press.

Meanwhile, he will ask Biff Jones "what the situation is."

"I'm not interested in Langer's plan for playing in all 48 States for free," he said. "The athletic departments have to be financed.

"But it is our duty to find out if scalpers are getting tickets, and if the tickets are being put out on a fair and equitable basis."

Mrs. Graham's Horses Steal Jamaica Show

Jamaica Race Track, N. Y., Nov. 1 (AP).—The doings of Mrs. Elizabeth (Arden) Graham's horses again stole the show on today's stakeless program.

The cosmetics lady, leading money-winning owner of the season, won the second and third races. Then her juvenile filly Easton Queen, a 1-to-3 shot in the fourth dash, tried to make it three straight and a perfect day for his owner but finished a poor third, causing one of the major setbacks of the year for the talent.

Easton Queen only earned the show in a photo while taking a nine lengths licking. Mrs. Dodge Sloane's fleet filly, Phantasy, made the race a runaway, breezing home five lengths on top to return $10.50. William Woodward's Alma Mater outfinished Easton Queen by four lengths for the place. The winner, second choice in the field of six juvenile lassies, ran the six furlongs in 1:13 1/5. She was the second winner on the card for popular rider Ted Atkinson.

The driving victories of Mrs. Graham's Gay Garland and Magnific Duel in earlier events, plus Easton Queen's third portion of the purse, boosted the pacemaking sportswoman's 1945 earnings to $512,045. She and veteran Trainer Tom Smith, to date this season, have won 53 races, besides having 22 seconds and 15 thirds. Incidentally, Gay Garland became the fourteenth 2-year-old to desert the ranks of nonwinners for Mrs. Graham this year.

Many a three-horse win and place parlay on Mrs. Graham's trio of favorites fell apart when Easton Queen ran third. There never was any doubt as to the result once Atkinson shot Phantasy into a lead of four lengths, which widened to eight around the bend. Easton Queen moved from fourth to second in the final quarter mile, only to weaken badly. Alma Mater then rallied into second position, but there was no menacing the flying Phantasy.

Hartnett to Pilot Buffalo; Harris Remains With Club

Buffalo, N. Y., Nov. 1 (U.P.).—Charles (Gabby) Hartnett, one of the greatest catchers of all time, was signed today to manage the Buffalo Bisons of the International League.

He succeeds Stanley (Bucky) Harris, who will remain with the club as general manager, a post he also held last season along with his field managership.

Hartnett, who set numerous catching records during his 18 seasons with the Chicago Cubs, managed the Jersey City team last year but resigned in mid-season in protest against the New York Giants' policy of raiding the farm club of its best players while it still was in the International League pennant race.

Hunting With Jack Bell

Today at the crack of dawn the wildfowl season of 1945 opened. Outside of the mild "bluebird" weather, this year's opening is a memorable one. Restrictions are lifted along the waterfronts, and for gasoline all one need do is drive up to a station and say, "Fill her up." Shotgun shells are available, not in large quantities, but enough to see you through an occasional day's shooting. North Carolina's famed shooting grounds don't seem to be so far away any more.

All other outdoor sports require mild and clear weather. Not so with the duck hunter. He looks for a nor'easter and a low barometer. The wildfowler accepts the hardship and exposure in the worst weather. The seasoned duck hunter, however, will bide his time and take advantage of the "good days" after this "bluebird season" is over.

Mr. Angler—the die-hard—is not yet willing to clean his fishing gear and dry out his lines and take up the old blunderbus. Don't know that we can blame him, what with striped bass, 6 and 10 pounders, romping around Point Lookout, Solomons and Rock Hall.

It may be said that in most instances October just about winds up plugging for black bass. However, this definitely does not apply to Maryland's tidal water pike. The grass and moss, which plague the artificial lure caster, are now settling to the bottom. It is then that the pike loses that "stick in its back" and takes on new vigor. He'll strike viciously at most any flashing lure.

Pike fishing is a sport for anyone. All it requires is a rod, reel, line, a few spoons and landing net. You can hire a boat for a buck and have a swell time. Good pike and yellow perch waters include the upper end of the Wicomico River, Patuxent River above the fork of Western Branch, and the South and Severn Rivers.

We can almost hear some say "What! Pike in brackish waters, never heard of it before." Neither did we until we came to Washington, although we didn't know which species inhabit the waters, the white pickerel (Esox vittatus), the black pickerel (Esox niger) or Esox phaleratus) all possessing more or less distinct characteristics. It is not necessary to enter into the details about these, but pike they are, averaging 2½ pounds.

At this time of the year the "sea pike" is beautiful, with a dash of vermilion along the undersides, and delicious eating. Must be the briny water. Nothing that swims, or walks, or flies does he spare when his appetite is whetted by a sharp, sweeping wind. ". . . The half frozen dyke, that hungers into madness every plunging pike."

Cavaliers, Aiming For W.Va., Polish Pass Offensive

Charlottesville, Va., oNv. 1 (AP).—The University of Virginia, seeking to keep its string of victories intact when it meets West Virginia at Charleston, W. Va., Saturday, spent today polishing up its forward-pass offense.

With Charlie Ellis doing most of the tossing, Cavalier ends and backs scampered through a stiff workout. Ray Brown and Ed Miffin relieved Ellis as a chucker.

Virginia's passing clicked in its first three games of the year, but last week the throwing fell off, the Cavaliers completing only two in nine against Virginia Tech.

Morgantown, W. Va., oNv. 1 (AP). The Mountaineers plan a line shift when they tackle Virginia at Charleston Saturday afternoon.

Coach Ira Rodgers announced yesterday that Loy Wagoner, 190-pound end, would get the starting call in place of Dick Maylander, who was injured against Maryland last week.

Patrick Waived

Hershey, Pa., Oct. 31 (U.P.).—Waivers were asked on former Penn State Quarterback Johnny Patrick by the Pittsburgh Steelers today. Drafted in 1941, Partick rejoined the club this year following his release from service but had seen little action.

Look Into Future

Penn State's 1919 football team was comprised almost wholly of World War I veterans.

Ballot Thieves Attacked by Office-Seeker

Declaring that there is "always some consideration for thievery," Carl Marshall, Republican candidate for lieutenant governor, last night charged the crookedness in the recent Democratic Primary in Virginia was prompted either by monetary consideration or by the hope of gaining favor of position with the organization in power.

In a radio address, aMrshall said, "I do not believe that the 'political crooks and ballot thieves,' as they were characterized by Judge Gunn who decided the contest, were paid money, at least by the contestants, for the crimes they committed. I believe that they were merely the instruments of their master political machine, seeking to curry favor and win position. Ithink this is the conclusion to be drawn from the opinion of Judge Gunn and the reports of the grand juries of Wise and Cumberland Counties."

Marshall declared that the "whole black mess must fall in the lap of the manipulators of the Byrd machine for the full period of time the Wise County Grand Jury found it had existed." This, he explained, was reported by the Jury to have been possibly as many as 20 or 25 years.

"Considering that only about 25 per cent of the adult population of Virginia votes, and that a large per cent of that vote consists of State office holders," Marshall said, "is there any wonder that the Byrd machine is able to keep itself in office and that in prestige Virginia has gone from top place among the States to bottom place?"

"This election is too important," Marshall said, "to be decided by party labels; it must be decided on issues and men. Your future and that of your children will be decided by the way you vote."

Salesman Bonded In Hit-Run Case

Alexandria police yesterday arrested Paul C. Horgan, 36, salesman, of 3001 Russell rd., Alexandria, on charges of hit and run, reckless driving and personal injury. Bond was set at $500.

Horgan was traced through his license plates, and arrested as the driver of an automobile which struck Elvyn L. Tolley, 37, of 1104 N. iPtt st., Alexandria, Wednesday night, throwing him from his motor scooter.

Tolley was taken to the Alexandria Hospital and treated for a hip injury.

X-Rays Show 11 Cases May Be Tuberculosis

Eleven cases showing indications of tuberculosis were found out of a total of 1060 X-rays in Alexandria October 20 and 22, it was reported yesterday by the Alexandria Tuberculosis Association.

Mrs. Ruth K. Graham, executive secretary, said an additional 26 cluding heart enlargements and spinal curvature which are being referred to the physicians of persons X-rayed.

'Slighting' Of Collins Given Airing

Charges that L. Preston Collins, Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor of Virginia, has suffered an "apparent slight" from some Arlington County Democrats were aired yesterday by the Arlington Committee for Collins.

Former State Senator Frank L. Ball, chairman of the Collins committee, said that many county residents had "indignantly asked why Pat Collins was not invited to Arlington to speak with the other candidates."

"We can only say," he declared, "that insofar as we can ascertain not a single person who supported Collins in the primary was consulted concerning the meeting at Jefferson High School last Monday night on the desirability of having him present to speak with the gubernatorial candidate."

At Monday night's meeting, gubernatorial candidate William M. Tuck, and Col. Charles R. Fenwick, native Arlingtonian, who was removed as candidate for lieutenant governor after a court decision, were principal speakers.

"The first we knew of the meeting," Senator Ball said, "it had already been called an dthe speakers selected. This apparent slight of Collins does not detract from his high qualifications for office. He is certainly as able as any man on either ticket. He made an open, clean battle for the nomination. He is the Democratic nominee and is entitled to the full party vote.

November Set For No Crabbing

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 1 (AP).—The Tidewater Fisheries Commission ordered today that November be eliminated from the crabbing season this year in order to "assure future high production."

The commission said that in view of "low production in Maryland from 1940 to 1945," the season was shortened. The action was taken despite the fact that "crab catches have been greater this year than they have for the past several years."

The commission said the shortened season would permit "considerable quantities of mated female crabs to escape catch and reach Virginia waters "for "spawning next spring and summer."

St. Agnes Students Hold 'Lamb's Tail' Carnival

Students in the upper classes of St. Agnes Episcopal School in Alexandria will hold their annual "Lamb's Tail Carnival" this afternoon and evening with half the proceeds for the school yearbook, "The Lamb's Tail," and the other half of the funds to be divided among the four high school classes.

Miss Robin Rau, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Rau, jr., of 515 Duke st., Alexandria, editor of the yearbook, is chairman of the carnival which begins at 3 p. m.

Arlington Veterans' Posts Plan Horse Show on Armistice Day

A horse show, proceeds of which will be used for veteran rehabilitation, will be held at the Ballston Stadium in Arlington County on Armistice Day.

The show, under the joint sponsorship of John Lyon Post No. 3150, Veterans of Foreign Wars, and General "Billy" Mitchell Post No. 85, American Legion, will get under way at 10:55 a. m.

Entries from Virginia, Maryland and the District of Columbia will compete for more than $700 in cash prizes, bonds, trophies and ribbons, according to Daniel A. Dugan and Neil Foss, cochairmen of the horse show committee. Fourteen classes, including two championships, will be judged.

Among prominent horsewomen and men who have been invited to participate in the show are Senator Wayne Morse of Oregon; U. S. Randall, Warrenton, Va.; Mrs. D. M. Lee, Middleburg, Va.; Miss Mildred Gaines, Fairfax; E. M. Palmer, Broad Run, Va.; Mr. and Mrs. H. H. England, Vienna, Va.; George E. YESTERDAY'S ANSWER

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl, 16, Whose Socialite Parents Are Fond, But Too Busy to Give Her Understanding, Asks How to Cope With Dangers That Accompany Love

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a junior in high school, 16 years old, and I am considered popular by all of my friends. My family is one of the leading families in town. My parents are very affectionate, but due to social obligations they don't have time to be understanding and we lack a close relationship.

Here is my problem: A year ago I started going with John, a very nice boy who is a year older than I. He went away to school last winter and we wrote friendly letters all year. When he came home from school we started dating again. My parents approve of him because they know his family well.

Dares Not Go Out With Beau

AT FIRST we went out with other couples and I always had fun as one of the foursome. Soon, however, we went out alone and our friendship turned into mutual love. We were always together and soon we couldn't control our emotions. Then and there I called a halt.

I have been playing the field since then, but I think only of John, whom I still love. Our families visit frequently, but they know nothing of our devotion. I have everyone believing that our love has ended, but we can't fool each other. Do you think I ought to go out with him again, since we cannot control our emotions? Or should I force myself to forget him? Due to our social circumstances, we cannot avoid seeing each other very often. Please give me your advice. I have no one else to turn to. L. W.

Boy She Loves Is Unreliable

DEAR L. W.: In promptly renouncing the society of the boy you love, in defense of moral integrity, you proved that you do have self-control, as well as great common sense. Also, in seizing that stern choice as your only defense, it seems to me you inadvertently proved (without realizing) the fact that John is either an emotional weakling, or a cynic in relation to girls—and was instinctively taking advantage of his special rating in your affections and your family's estimate.

Had he been, or was he now, as eager as you are to give trustworthy account of himself in an unchaperoned romance, if he had idealism and strength of character to match your own—and yours is not of sainted proportions, but just enough to decisively favor honorable conduct and self-respect, —I am convinced that by mutual agreement you could have managed a fine companionship, unspoiled by dangerous emotional tempests.

She Is Solving Problem Wisely

YET I am equally convinced that you showed wisdom beyond your years in breaking off the relationship. I imagine John's disposition to live for the moment was the factor in the situation beyond your power to control. If he has a conscience, it is not sufficiently developed to be compatible with yours. And I think that by implication, at least, he had challenged you to violate your principles or forfeit his attentions. I doubt that he tried—or wanted—to keep the record straight.

You are well on the way to solving the problem with credit to yourself. And in my opinion, you should not go out alone with John again. As Shakespeare says, 'Repent what's past; avoid what is to come. That monster, custom, is angel yet in this. Refrain tonight, and that shall lend a kind of easiness to the next abstinence: the next more easy; for use almost can change the stamp of nature." In brief, your infatuation for John will fade in proportion as you refuse to let it rule your actions. And you have chosen the only course guaranteed to enhance his regard for you. M. H.

Martha Ellyn's Platter Chatter

He Eats Spinach Because He Likes It

If you were to have as a dinner guest the Nation's No. 1 food man, Secretary of Agriculture Anderson, you wouldn't need to ponder over the menu. You couldn't please him better than by setting before him a dish of stewed tomatoes. He'll take them escalloped, too.

If you don't have the tomatoes, you still needn't be stymied, because the Secretary has other favorite foods that are not only easy to prepare but easy to get. All kinds of vegetables prepared with cream sauce are on his preferred list. Even the much-maligned spinach the Secretary eats regularly—because he likes it, not because he believes it good for him. Corn pudding, too, is a dish to set before this fellow from New Mexico.

Nation's Meat Investigator

He thinks salads are to be eaten and enjoyed, not discussed and dismissed with a frown and a shrug of the shoulders. It may be the New Mexico influence in his life, but he likes avocados in his salads.

Sure he likes meat. In fact he is so fond of it that it is indirectly the reason that he is today handling the double-barreled job of Secretary of Agriculture and War Food Administrator. In the days before he took on the job of being the Nation's food boss he was a Congressman from New Mexico. His doctor told him to eat a goodly amount of meat. He couldn't get it because that was back in the days of meat shortage when the armed forces required most of the meat, and the black market was getting a share of the remainder. So Mr. Anderson turned his thoughts to an investigation of the meat situation and became the chairman of the committee that was to turn a searchlight on the reasons for such a short meat supply.

Meat—just so it's meat—and WELL DONE, that's the way to prepare it for this man who has done so much to straighten out the meat muddle. You can bet that the Secretary is rejoicing with the rest of us who like chicken, that it is no longer difficult to catch a bird. Mr. Secretary is not particular about whether he gets light or dark meat, but you'll probably get a bigger smile than usual from this easy-to-please man, if your offering is drumstick or liver. Turkey gets Mr. Anderson's approval, too—especially the dark meat.

When asked if there was any food that he didn't like he answered without hesitation:

"No bread pudding at any time."

Likes Salt-Rising Bread

Asked if it was thumbs down on all bread his answer was a surprise.

"I'm very fond of salt-rising bread," said Mr. Anderson. "Nothing is better than toast made from it. I like it cut very thin and pretty brown. And the finest toast, I think, is made not in a toaster but in the oven. I like to smell the bread toasting.

Like all Swedish people, Mr. Anderson drinks plenty of coffee. He likes to smell its aroma while it is brewing. He is not so consistent in the way he takes his coffee.

IF THERE WERE A MILLION MEN like Secretary of Agriculture Anderson, menus would be easier to plan. No rubber stamp menus for this No. 1 food man. Stewed tomatoes, meat, salad, corn pudding and a host of other foods are the dish of this royal gentleman who's reputed to know more about the over-all picture of food than any other man in the whole wide world

"I start in the morning with cream in my coffee, but the rest of the day I drink it black," said the Secretary. No amount of inquiry brought to light how many cups of coffee he drinks a day. But he likes it percolated. However, he assures me he had an open mind and would be happy to drink this beverage made my favorate way—by filtration.

If your man is as easy to please as our food czar, then you can design a menu from Mr. Anderson's food preferences. This might be your menu.

Dinner Menu

Vegetable Juice Cocktail
Roast Chicken
Corn Pudding Creamed Spinach
Stewed Tomatoes
Avocado Salad
Salt-Rising Bread
Fresh Fruit Compote
Coffee

Stewed tomatoes can be made from either fresh or canned tomatoes. You can make this dish with or without bread crumbs. This is a recipe for using the canned tomatoes:

STEWED TOMATOES

Combine 2½ cups tomatoes, 2 teaspoons sugar, ¾ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon paprika and ½ cup soft bread crumbs. Simmer for 10 minutes or bake in hot oven, 400 degrees, for 20 minutes. Butter may be added if desired.

The following recipe for making corn pudding produces a good heft dish. This recipe uses canned corn. If you wish a dainter dish you can make it from the kernels cut from quick-frozen ears of corn, adding only sugar, cream, salt and pepper and butter and bake in a moderate oven, 350 degrees, for 45 minutes or until firm

CORN PUDDING

Drain the contents of one No. 2 can corn (2½ cups). Reserve liquid. Melt 2 tablespoons butter and stir in until blended 2 tablespoons flour. Stir in slowly 1 cup cream and corn liquid. When sauce is smooth and boiling add drained corn. Stir mixture until it boils. Reduce heat to low. Beat 2 egg yolks. Pour part of corn mixture over them. Beat and return to saucepan. Stir and cook for several minutes to permit yolks to thicken slightly. Add ¾ teaspoon salt and ¼ teaspoon paprika. Cool mixture. Place on a platter and whip until stiff 2 egg whites, to which as been added ⅛ teaspoon salt. Fold whites lightly into corn mixture. Bake pudding in ungreased baking dish in moderate oven, 325 degrees, for 10 minutes, increase heat to 350 degrees and bake until firm—about 20 minutes.

Mrs. Truman Attends Luncheon On Hill; Schedules Social Events

The First Lady went back to one of her old haunts yesterday, the Senate dining room, and joined in the fun of the Idaho-Maine potato contest that had Capitol Hill in an uproar during the luncheon hour.

Mrs. Truman's appearance on the Hill was brief, however, as she was due in another part of town for a private luncheon engagement. That, so far as official announcements go, completed her schedule for the day.

Keeping "off-the-record" luncheon dates with old friends is a privilege Mrs. Truman has retained since she moved into the White House. Having lived in Washington a number of years she has a host of acquaintances, and whenever possible she lunches "out," usually at the friend's residence or a private club.

West Point Weekend

In the coming fortnight neither Mrs. Truman nor her daughter, Margaret, has a heavy engagement slate. The latter will be in West Point over the weekend to attend the football game and hop. Miss Truman, who is making her second trip to the Military Academy, will be accompanied by her friend, Miss Jane Lingo, and, of course, the ever-present Secret Service man.

If possible, both Mrs. Truman and Miss Truman will be at Constitution Hall tonight to hear Grace Moore's presentation of "La Tosca." In the event the First Family cannot attend their box will be occupied by servicemen.

Mrs. Helm and Miss Odum, who received ladies of the press at the White House yesterday, announced that Mrs. Truman's next official entertainment will be a tea November 6, when she will receive members of the National Committee of Volunteer Special Services of American Red Cross. The tea will be at 4 p. m. at the White House.

Plans Buffet Supper

November 10 the First Lady plans a buffet supper for members of women's press corps. Invitations, which will be mailed within a week, will state exact time and room.

Next on the official docket is a reception to be given in Mrs. Truman's honor by the Colonial Dames. This will be held November 12, and on November 14 she will make another public appearance when she attends a luncheon of the Fashion Group at the Statler, when she will be honor guest. That same afternoon she will appear at the benefit bazaar sponsored by American Relief for France Association.

November 19 both Mrs. Truman and her daughter will attend a tea in their honor given by the American Association of University Women.

The First Family, as yet, have no plans for the Thanksgiving holiday and, for the moment, have no house guests.

Miss Willard Fetes Couple

Miss Abby Willard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. Willard 2d, was hostess at a dinner last night at the Shoreham in honor of Miss Barbara Wahl and her fiance, Lieut. Austin Leonard Roberts, USMCR.

Miss Wahl is the daughter of Mrs. Lutz Wahl and the late Major General Wahl. She will be married tomorrow in Walter Reed Chapel and Miss Willard will serve as her maid of honor.

Guests included the bridesmaids, Miss Joan Garwood, Miss Rosemary Parke, Miss Audrey Smith, Miss Marcia Schwalbe; and ushers, Lieut. John C. Applegate, Lieut. J. J. Meek, Lieut. Kenneth Belt, Lieut. Richard W. Wiltshire and S/Sergt. Charles Roberts.

Auchinclosses In New York

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Auchincloss are in New York for a short stay and are at the Ritz-Carlton.

Mrs. Walter Woodruff has gone to Morristown, N. J., for a visit to her mother, Mrs. E. Martin Phillipi.

Mrs. Louis Marks, who has been in Washington for two months, left yesterday for her home in Evansville, Ind., accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Estelle Nordlinger, who will spend the winter there.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Wolf, jr., and family are now established in their new home at 4502 Marling Lane, Bethesda, Md.

Mrs. Treglown to Return

Friends of Mrs. Edward Treglown will be glad to know that she will be back in Washington in about a fortnight from New York, following an operation yesterday at Harkness Pavilion. Commander Treglown is in New York with Mrs. Treglown.

Town Talk

By Eva Hinton

DECIDEDLY gay despite its being a farewell, was the cocktail party given at the British Officers Club the other afternoon by Maj. Gen. and Mrs. F. H. N. Davidson. There was a pleasant mingling of nationalities and of rank and nonrank. Everyone, from the dynamic-looking Russian general who chatted with Gen. Idwald Edwards, USA, to Maj. Tom Byrd, very nice aide to Field Marshal Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, was having a good time.

Admiral of the Fleet Sir James Somerville was squiring his pretty, brown-eyed daughter, who wore three ribbons on her WREN uniform. Knowing how sparing the British are of their ribbons and decorations, I was much impressed, and made a mental note to find out what they stand for.

The admiral, whose conversation is so salty and full of topsails and binnacles that it fair scares a landlubber, was very much pleased because he had just completed an article for an American yachting magazine. One of his articles was about the miniature square-rigger which he had built and which he took with him aboard his warship. It, I mean she, could be handled by a crew of three or even two, and was lowered over the side whenever the big ship came to anchor.

Admiral Somerville finally lost his beloved square-rigger in a squall off the Isle of Wight when she capsized because of shifting ballast. The admiral himself was struggling in the icy water when someone interrupted us to bring him a cocktail and I still have a very strong feeling that I should throw him a life-raft.

The interrupter was Capt. Leopold Rebbeck, Assistant Naval Attache of the British Embassy, who wanted to tell us about Birmingham, Ala., where he went to make a Navy Day speech and was headlined in the papers, along with another speaker, as "Two Famous Skippers."

I told him absent-mindedly (I was still worried about the admiral in the water though I felt pretty sure he didn't drown) that, newspapers being what they are, Captain Rebbeck and his colleague were lucky not to have been misprinted into "Two Famous Kippers."

TWO distinguished soldiers who had much to talk about were Field Marshal Sir Henry Maitland Wilson and Maj. Gen. Russell Maxwell, USA, who served under his command in the Middle East. From what I hear, the field marshal is as popular with the Americans whom he commanded as General Eisenhower is with the British who were under him.

Attractive Mrs. Maxwell was excitedly expecting news from her youngest son, Lieut. Bob Maxwell, just arrived from overseas. Besides an interesting career which started as an enlisted man in the Middle East and included a commission won in the field and a place in the palace guard during the Tehran conference, Bob Maxwell wrote and illustrated a pamphlet for the War Department titled "Invisible Weapon," which gives facts and figures on lend-lease.

The Davidsons will be greatly missed in Washington and it's nice to know that piquant and pretty Mrs. Davidson will remain here till after Christmas because of their son, who is in school in America.

General Davidson doesn't like saying goodby to Washington, because I heard him say to a departing guest: "Don't say goodby. Come again day after tomorrow to our other party. Same time, same place —and wear the same dress!"

AT Col. Douglas Parmentier's gala cocktail party at the United Nations Club I saw lovely blonde Mrs. Noel Macey, whose husband is with the State Department. The Maceys, recently returned from their honeymoon, have bought the house of the John Wacks in Georgetown.

Only this year the Wacks bought and did over one of the finest houses in Georgetown but at the end of the war they decided to return to California.

Before leaving they invited their old friends, the Maceys, to tea and Mr. Wack happened to remark that he had put the house on the market.

"Well, take it off," said Mr. Macey, "I've bought it!"

And, just to make my readers more envious, the cook stays with the house!

Mrs. Edwin Parker Entertains Guests

Mrs. Edwin B. Parker has as guests this week the Bishop of Washington and Mrs. Angus Dun, and her nephew and niece, Senor Lopez Fersquet and Senora de Fersquet.

Senora de Fersquet, the former Miss Helen Bigger, was born in Korea, where her father was a doctor. She and her husband, who is here on business, will leave for New York tomorrow.

Norrises to Entertain

Dr. and Mrs. Leo Brison Norris will entertain at a buffet supper this evening, taking their guests later to hear "La Tosca," opening performance of the Philadelphia La Scala Opera Company, at Constitution Hall.

Legal Sorority Slates Annual Tea Tomorrow

Province 2 of Kappa Beta Pi, international legal sorority, will entertain members and guests at its annual tea tomorrow from 5 to 7 p. m. at the Statler Hotel, South American Room. Guest of honor will be Mrs. Edwina V. A. Avery, newly elected international grand dean, who will come from Philadelphia for the occasion. Mrs. Mae Peacock, international grand registrar, will accompany Mrs. Avery.

Mme. Wei, wife of the Chinese Ambassador, who is a member, will attend. Ellen K. Ready, judge of the Municipal Court for the District, and Judge Sara T. Hughes, Dallas, Tex., who is in Washington, also will be present.

Patrons to Attend

Patrons, who are expected to attend are: Justice Wiley Rutledge and Mrs. Rutledge, Justice D. Lawrence Groner and Mrs. Groner, Judge and Mrs. George P. Barse, Justin and Mrs. Miller, Dr. and Mrs. Charles Pergler, Mr. and Mrs. Walter M. Bastian, Mr. and Mrs. Godfrey L. Munter, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Carusi, and Mrs. Hayden Johnson, patrons of Omicron Chapter of National University.

Also Justice Harold M. Stephens and Mrs. Stephens, Justice and Mrs. F. Dickinson Letts, Justice and Mrs. David A. Pine, Miss Maude E. Alton, Maj. J. Garfield Riley and Mrs. Grace Hays Riley, Mrs. Rebecca Love Notz, patrons of Epsilon Chapter of the Washington College of Law.

In addition, Dean William C. Van Vleck, Col. and Mrs. Walter C. Clephane, Prof. Charles Collier, Mr. James Kirkland, Mr. and Mrs. J. Forrester Davidson, patrons of Nu Chapter of George Washington University.

Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of George Washington University, and Mrs. Marvin, Dr. Paul F. Douglass, president of American University, Dean James H. Hayden and Mrs. Hayden of Columbus University are expected to attend.

Several to Receive

Robert H. Shields and Mrs. Shields, will be present as will Mr. and Mrs. Hugh H. Obear; Mrs. Sara Mero Williams; Edward H. Curran, United States attorney, and Mrs. Curran; Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Myers, and Mrs. Blanche La Du.

Guests will be received by Mrs. Avery; Mrs. Peacock; Mrs. Sara Mero Williams, Dean of Providence 2; Miss Marcellina Hummer, Miss Blanche M. Margason, Miss Clara L. Longstreth, and Mrs. Lynne Kaufman, deans of the local chapters.

Arrangements are being handled by a committee including Mrs. Irene Kennedy, Miss Annice Pearle Mount, Miss Marcellina Hummer and Miss Sara B. McGrann.

Colonel Stowe Host at Dual Purpose Party

A cocktail party with a double purpose was given by Lieut. Col. Albert J. Stowe Wednesday at the Carlton Hotel, celebrating Halloween and the day on which the host began his terminal leave.

Gen. Omar Bradley, Administrator of Veterans' Affairs, and Mrs. Bradley were there and among the hundred or more other guests were Lieut. Gen. and Mrs. Stanley Embrick, Lieut. Gen. and Mrs. Leroy Lutes, Lieut. Gen. Daniel I. Sultan, Lieut. Gen. Alvin V. Gillem, jr., Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Clarence R. Huebner, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. George V. Strong, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Richard Donavan, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Alexander D. Surles, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. E. F. Harding and Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Richard I. Maxwell.

Other two-star generals there with their wives were Maj. Gen. Edwal H. Edwards, Maj. Gen. Frank Lowe, Maj. Gen. Frank E. Stoner also Maj. Gen. James Ulio and Maj Gen. Joseph N. Datlon.

Then there were Rear Admiral and Mrs. R. E. Schuirmann, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Gilchrist Stockton, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Donald B. Adams, Col. and Mrs. George Parker, Col. and Mrs. Robert B. Richards, Col. and Mrs. Frank Collins, Capt. A. C. Thomas, USN, J. Edgar Hoover, Senator and Mrs. John H. Overton and their daughter, Ruth; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Freer, and Capt. and Mrs. E. M. Zacharias.

Here from Louisiana especially for the occasion were Mr. and Mrs. Rife Saunders, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Robinson, Morgan N. Walker, Paul A. Gilham, jr., Hugh Coughlin and James E. McLemore.

Sen. Brewster, Wife Entertain

Senator and Mrs. Owen Brewster entertained at dinner last night at the Sulgrave Club, honoring Gov. and Mrs. Horace Hildreth of Maine. The dinner preceded the reception at the Washington Hotel given by the Maine State Society for Gov. and Mrs. Hildreth.

Dinner guests included Senator Wallace H. White, jr., Representative Margaret Chase Smith, Representative Frank Fellows, Representative and Mrs. Robert Hale, Maj. Gen. Frank E. Lowe, A. K. Gardiner, Commissioner of Agriculture; Mr. and Mrs. Harold Craig, Mrs. May Craig, Miss Nina Lunn, Jack Moran, secretary to Gov. Hildreth; Capt. and Mrs. Charles F. Brewster and Lieut. Richard Marsh.

Farewell Party

Capt. and Mrs. Josephus Daniels, jr., will entertain at a farewell party Tuesday, November 6, from 5:30 to 7:30, at their home on 35th st. Captain Daniels, son of Josephus Daniels, former United States Ambassador to Mexico, is to return shortly to his home, accompanied by Mrs. Daniels.

D. C. Stores' Inventories 12% Heavier

By S. Oliver Goodman

Despite continued sales increases, inventories of Washington department stores on September 30 were 12 per cent heavier than on the same 1944 date, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported last night.

September sales of local stores were reported 1 per cent ahead of last year, while for the first nine months this year, local sales were 9 per cent more than in the corresponding 1944 period.

In its weekly sales report the Richmond Reserve Bank said that Washington store sales showed a 4 per cent increase in the week ended October 27. For the four weeks ended October 27 the volume here was 10 per cent ahead of the like period last year.

Collections on local charge accounts in September were reported 55 per cent of such accounts due on September 1, while the Fifth Reserve District as a whole showed average collections of 56 per cent of such accounts.

Business Briefs Of D. C. Interest

Goodwyn Gets Award

Wilfred L. Goodwyn, jr., partner in the Washington investment house of Goodwyn & Olds, received the Exceptional Civilian Service Award from the War Department for work performed for the Army Signal Corps. Brig. Gen. Edgar L. Clewell, chief of the Procurement and Distribution Service, presented the citation to Mr. Goodwyn which in part read, "In recognition of his exceptional service in organizing and supervising the price adjustment activities of the Signal Corps. His initiative and sound judgment in developing principles, policies and procedures have resulted in an effective administration of the renegotiation act."

Living Costs Show Dip

Living costs dropped .4 of 1 per cent in September for the average family of wage earners and lower salaried clerical workers, the National Industrial Conference Board said yesterday.

The board said its costs of living index, which had reached a 24-year high in June and July, dropped to 106.2 in September, which was 1.1 per cent higher than the level of September, 1944. The decline was largely accounted for, it said, by lower food costs, this factor falling .9 of 1 per cent.

Purchasing power of the dollar, the board said, was 94.2 cents in September, in terms of the 1923 dollar. This was .4 of 1 per cent above August, but 1.1 per cent below the figure of a year ago.

Payne Joins ABA Staff

John H. Payne, jr., former secretary-treasurer of the Virginia Bankers Association, has joined the staff of the American Bankers Association as an assistant to Harold Stonier, executive manager.

Mr. Payne has been in the Navy the past three years, participating in the Solomon Islands campaign, among others. He was a lieutenant.

Strobhar Rejoins Brokerage

Capt. Henry G. Strobhar has returned to his desk with Johnston, Lemon & Co. after three years with the Army Service Forces. He became associated with Johnston, Lemon in 1941 and previously was manager of the Washington office of Fenner & Beane.

Earnings Statements

U. S. Industrial Chemicals and subsidiaries report net income for six months ended September 30 of $946,675, equal to $2.17 a common share, compared with $848,945, or $2.25 a share on common stock outstanding in the similar period a year ago.

General Cable Corp. reports for nine months ended September 30 net profit of $1,590,015, equal to $10.60 a preferred share against $1,700,232, or $11.33 a preferred share in the like 1944 period. Unpaid dividends on the $7 preferred shares amounted to $52.50 a share on September 30.

Commercial Credit Co. reports third quarter net income of $1,236,505, compared with $1,382,707 for corresponding 1944 period. The nine-month total was $4,076,747, against $4,422,765 for the 1944 period. The quarterly net income after preferred dividends was $1,106,946, equal to 60 cents per common share, as compared with $1,253,147, or 68 cents per common share, in the third quarter of 1944.

Crosley Corp. reports for nine months to September 30 net profit of $1,380,902, equal to $2.53 a share after charges and reserves of $756,000. This compared with profit of $3,571,388, or $6.54 a share, in the 1944 period.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Nov. 1 (AP).—Buying and short-covering stimulated by several bullish influences boosted most grain futures more than a cent a bushel at times today.

Factors stimulating buying included a larger than expected increase in the Government subsidy to flour millers for November, improved flour sales and reports that the Government
